VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY 2006-2007

SHIRLEY WERNER

This survey of Vergilian scholarship is the forty-fifth in the Vergilius series. Classical World 68.1 (1974), published in association with The Vergilian Society, Inc., contains Alexander G. McKay's "Recent Work on Vergil: A Bibliographic Survey, 1964-73." The survey was reprinted in The Classical World Bibliography of Vergil, Walter Donlan, ed., New York and London: Garland 1978. Subsequent reviews have appeared in Vergilius 19 (1973) – 52 (2006). After the death of Alexander G. McKay in August of this year, Shirley Werner generously undertook to carry on this important survey for the Vergilian Society. We are deeply indebted to her for her generosity and dedication, in taking on so daunting a task, especially on such short notice. Readers are invited and encouraged hereafter to send material to Dr. Werner, the new Editor of the Annual Bibliography, at the following address:

Hallett examines affinities between Sulpicia's poems and, among other topics, Vergil's treatment of Dido. Nadeau argues that Vergil establishes the harpy Celaeno as a trope for Sextus Pompeius. Solin shows that inscriptional testimony allows us to conclude that the river name Liris could also be used as a personal name (cf. Aen. 11.670). Ziolkowski explores the theme of heroic hesitation and its correlation with civic crisis through a discussion of the character of Aeneas and of a number of other heroes from antiquity to modernist times.

Fréchet discusses Aen. 6.635-676. Knox suggests that the first book of Tibullus may have been published in 29 B.C. rather than in the mid-20s. This opens the door to a better contextualized examination of pastoral motifs in Tibullus and his relationship to Vergil's Eclogues. Lütkemeyer discusses Ovid's intertextual allusion to the first Eclogue. Pucci suggests that "The transgression Vergil and Horace practice in 1.3 is poetic composition itself." Putnam contains a chapter on Vergil.

Booth comments on Aen. 1.263-96. Hardie comments on the "allusive plot of incestuous brother-sister marriage" which runs through Vergil's story of Dido and Aeneas, signaled both by imagery and by allusion to Callimachus. Otón Sobrino discusses the theme of existential suffering in Vergil.

Barnes touches among other topics on the authorship of the Cento Probae, accepting the view of D. R. Shanzer ("The anonymous Carmen contra paganos and the date and identity of the Centonist Proba," Revue des études augustiennes 21 [1986] 232-48; "The date and identity of the Centonist Proba," Recherches Augustiniennes 27 [1994] 75-96) that the cento must be attributed to Anicia Faltonia Proba, the wife of Petronius Probus, consul in A.D. 371, rather than to Faltonia Betitia Proba, wife of Clodius Celsinus Adelfius, prefect of Rome in A.D. 351. Casali observes that Silius 12.387-414 fictionally introduces Ennius as a centurion fighting in the Roman army, fashioning the figure of Ennius as a warrior-poet from a reading of Vergil. Coffee shows that Statius follows Vergilian epic precedent in using economic language, including prosaic financial terms, for its ethical connotations. D'Alessandro Behr includes discussion of Lucan's apostrophes as a rejoinder to Vergil's apostrophes in the Aeneid. Lunelli writes about the subscriptio of Apronianus Asterius found on the Medicean codex of Vergil (Firenze, Biblioteca Medicea Laurenziana, Pl. XXXIX, 1: f. 8r), datable to A.D. 494. Mastrangelo discusses Prudentius' poetry in relation to Aen. 6 and Roman epic tradition. Nickbackt shows that Tacitus, Ann. 1.7.1 alludes to Aen. 8.648. Paschalis discusses the relationship of Daphnis and Chloe to the bucolic and pastoral tradition.

In Ch. 8, "Mythographus Vergilianus" (184), Cameron argues that "we have what amounts to" a mythological paraphrase/companion for Vergil embedded in the late antique commentaries. "[T]he Servian corpus is by far the fullest and most important source for those central medieval mythographic texts, the first and second Vatican mythographers – and for the medieval Latin West in general."
