

(VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY (1975-76

Author(s): A. G. McKay

Source: Vergilius (1959-), 1976, No. 22 (1976), pp. 34-44

Published by: The Vergilian Society

Stable URL: <https://www.jstor.org/stable/41592097>

JSTOR is a not-for-profit service that helps scholars, researchers, and students discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content in a trusted digital archive. We use information technology and tools to increase productivity and facilitate new forms of scholarship. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org

Your use of the JSTOR archive indicates your acceptance of the Terms & Conditions of Use, available at <https://about.jstor.org/terms>

JSTOR

The Vergilian Society is collaborating with JSTOR to digitize, preserve and extend access to Vergilius (1959-)

VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY (1975-76)

The present survey of Vergilian scholarship is the fourteenth in the Vergilius series. Classical World 68.1 (1974), published in association with the Vergilian Society, Inc., contains my 'Recent Work on Vergil: A Bibliographical Survey, 1964-1973.' The 92-page Survey may be ordered from the offices of THE CLASSICAL WORLD or from the Treasurer of the Vergilian Society, Inc. Addenda and subsequent surveys have appeared in Vergilius 19 (1973), 20 (1974), and 21 (1975). The editor of 'Vergilian Bibliography' welcomes reprints of articles and bibliographical notices for inclusion in the annual review. The mailing address: Department of Classics, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario L8S 4M2, Canada.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

1. F. A. Peeters, Bibliography of Vergil (Rome 1975). (Reprint of the Bulletin of the American Classical League, New York, 1933).

2. The Vergiliana (Publius Vergilius Maro). Microforms International Marketing Co. (Pergamon Press, Inc.) (Elmsford, New York, 1975).

The Peeters bibliography requires expansion and caution regarding entries. The Vergiliana consists of three Vergil collections housed at Philipps Academy, Andover, Mass: the Charles H. Forbes Virgil Collection, the Bancroft Collection of English Versions of Vergil's Poems, and the Ballard Collection of Translations. The collections are available either on 197 reels of microfilm, or 5000 microfiche.

EDITIONS

3. N. Horsfall, rev., M. Geymonat, P. Vergili Maronis Opera & R. D. Williams, The Aeneid of Virgil, Books 7-12, JRS 54 (1974) 273-6.

4. D. A. West, rev., 'Two Editions of Virgil: Williams (7-12) and Geymonat', CR 26 (1976) 34-6.

APPENDIX VERGILIANA

5. Cipriano Conti, Catalepton XI: Lusus letterario o autentico epitaffio? (Perugia 1975).

6. J. F. Killeen, 'Tau gallicum (Vergil, Catalepton 2,4)', Orpheus 21 (1974) 57-9.

7. R. O. A. M. Lyne, 'Ciris 89-91,' CQ 25 (1975) 156-7.

8. D. O. Ross, Jr., 'The Culex and Moretum as Post-Augustan Literary Parodies,' HSCP 79 (1975) 235-63.

Ross identifies Culex and Moretum as clever post-Vergilian parodies. Culex poses as a period piece but reflects contemporary (late Tiberian?) poetic manners; Moretum is a superb parody wherein epic expressions and mannerisms are trivialized by their contexts or by the sense they convey. The realistic touches are reflections of Alexandrian and neoteric treatments of the heroic in domestic settings.

ECLOGUES: GENERAL STUDIES

9. A. J. Boyle, 'A Reading of Virgil's Eclogues,' Ramus 4:2 (1975) 187-203.

10. Robert Coleman, 'Vergil's Pastoral Modes,' Ramus 4:2 (1975) 140-62.
11. Jonathan Foster, rev. W. Berg, Early Virgil, CR 26 (1976) 33-4.
12. E. D. Kollmann, 'A study of Proper Names in Vergil's Eclogues,' CW 69 (1975-6) 97-112.
13. H. Offermann, 'Eine Kleinigkeit zu Vergils Eklogen,' Grazer Beiträge 3 (1975) 275-90.
14. Niall Rudd, 'ARCHITECTURE: theories about Virgil's Eclogues,' Lines of Enquiry: Studies in Latin Poetry (Cambridge 1976) 119-44.
15. Ernst A. Schmidt, Zur Chronologie der Eklogen Vergils (Heidelberg 1974).
16. C. P. Segal, rev. W. Berg, Early Virgil, CW 69 (1975-6) 144.
17. Marisa Squillante, 'Studi sulle Bucoliche e sull'Eneide di Virgilio', BStudLat 5 (1975) 66-77.

Rudd's chapter assesses various principles and arguable designs relating to the architecture of the Eclogues. Each system contains a defect; none claims a superiority which might suggest Vergil's handiwork. Rudd assumes that the final pattern of the book was not a matter of primary importance to Vergil. Rudd also introduces the first book of Horace's Satires for parallel discussion; comparable questions arise. Scholars have been more concerned with the texture than with the architecture of the collection. Rudd's criteria for the poet's blueprint are cogent: the features of the plan should be large, bold, and simple, certainly discernible when pointed out. 'The more subtle an architectural theory is, and the more it tries to explain, the less persuasive it becomes.' Kollmann considers the function and place of Proper Names in the Bucolics where their appearance is exceptional. Kollmann assigns the names to four groups according to the nature of their content: (1) Poetry, Song; (2) Love; (3) Shepherds and their life; and (4) Idyllic world vs. Reality. Names communicate associations and rouse the emotions; they activate information and stimulate reactions. The Theocritean contribution of Proper Names is relatively small. The articles by Boyle and Coleman are required reading for students of the Eclogues. Schmidt's exercise with the chronological problems attaching to the Bucolics is intricate and somewhat defeating; Rudd's chapter is a useful companion piece.

ECLOGUES: INDIVIDUAL POEMS

18. Hans-Joachim Glücklich, 'Der Übersetzungskommentar,' Der Alt-sprachliche Unterricht 18 (1975) 5-18.
19. Michael C. J. Putnam, 'Virgil's First Eclogue: Poetics of Enclosure,' Ramus 4:2 (1975) 163-86.
20. J. Van Sickle, 'Epic and Bucolic (Theocritus, Id. VII; Virgil, Ecl. I),' Quaderni Urbinati 19 (1975) 45-72.
21. H. MacL. Currie, 'The third Eclogue and the Roman Comic Spirit,' Mnemosyne 29 (1976).
22. M. Mayer, 'Quis fuit alter. En torno a Verg. Ecl. 3, 40,' Durius 2 (1974) 397-411.
23. D. Fehling, 'Ultima aetas et novus ordo (Verg. ecl. 4, 4sq.),' Monumentum Chiloniense. Festschr. f. Erich Burck (ed. Eckard Lefèvre) (Amsterdam 1975) 296-310.

24. G. Williams, 'A version of pastoral. Virg. Ecl. 4,' Quality and Pleasure in Latin Poetry (edd. Tony Woodman, David West) (London 1974) 31-46.
 25. R. D. Williams, 'Virgil's Fourth Eclogue – A Literary Analysis,' PVS 14 (1974-5) 1-6.
 26. A. Wlosok, 'Cumaeum carmen (Verg., Ecl. 4, 4): Sibyllenorakel oder Hesiodgedicht?', Forma Futuri 693-711.
 27. E. Coleiro, 'In medio mihi Caesar erit. Quantum et quo consilio in poesi Vergiliana medii versus Augustum Caesarem ostendant,' 5ème Congrès international pour le Latin Vivant, Pau (1-5 avril, 1975) 57-60.
 28. David O. Ross, Jr., 'The Sixth Eclogue: Virgil's poetic genealogy,' Backgrounds to Augustan Poetry (Cambridge 1975) 18-38.
 29. B. D. Frischer, At tu aureus esto. Eine Interpretation von Vergils 7. Ekloga. (Heidelberg 1975).
 30. David O. Ross, Jr., 'Gallus and the Tenth Eclogue,' Backgrounds to Augustan Poetry (Cambridge 1975) 85-106.
- Glücklich's article examines Eclogues 1, 1-15. Putnam's article offers fresh and perceptive insights into the nature of the first Bucolic. Van Sickle's study partly complements and enlarges Putnam's argument. Gordon and Deryck Williams offer highly instructive analyses of the Messianic Eclogue. R. D. Williams emphasises that the idyllic vision will come true not in the pastoral world but in the real world, and that the Golden Age is not irretrievably lost (as in Hesiod and Catullus) but is about to return. His final verdict is temperate and sound: 'We have a sonorous and moving paean set in the form of a birthday celebration for a child whose birth corresponds in time with the birth of a new world'. Frischer's study of Eclogue 7 is sensitive and immensely enlightening; a brilliant exposition of an intricate, enigmatic text. Ross's response to the richness of detail in Silenus' song (Eclogue 6) is thorough and courageous; Gallus' initiation provides the key. Gallus' poetry, diverse and various in purpose, form, theme or genre, embodied the unity of poetic tradition. The pipes which the Muses bestow guarantee real poetry; poetic genealogy determines the genuine nature of verse. The Sixth Eclogue is a statement and demonstration of a new poetic credo. Ross's chapter on Eclogue 10 underscores the conflict in the poet's profession: 'the second half of the Eclogue Book begins with the expression of potential power and ends with the realization of failure: there is no theme more Virgilian than this.'

GEORGICS: GENERAL STUDIES

31. Giuseppe Augello, 'Divini gloria ruris,' RCCM 16 (1974) 137-63.
 32. Teresa Piscitelli, 'Studi sulle Georgiche di Virgilio (1968-1974),' BStudLat 5 (1975) 240-65.
 33. Stanley Shechter, 'The Aition and Virgil's Georgics,' TAPA 105 (1975) 347-91.
 34. Maria Sodja, Vergil's Poetic Art in the Georgics: The Poetic Recasting of Prose Material in Varro's De Re Rustica. Diss. University of Wisconsin, 1973. Summary in DA 34 (1974) 6612A-6613A.
- Shechter's article discusses passages in the Georgics patterned after 'Callimachean' aitia; he leaves little doubt about Vergil's Georgics being profoundly oriented towards the aition.

GEORGICS: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

35. Ricarda Liver, 'Clarissimi mundi lumina. Zu einem Interpretationsproblem in Prooemium von Vergils Georgica,' MH 33 (1976) 33-7.

36. R. O. A. M. Lyne, 'Scilicet et tempus veniet . . . Virg., Georg. I, 463-514,' Quality and Pleasure in Latin Poetry (edd. Tony Woodman, David West) (London 1974) 47-66.

37. M. C. J. Putnam, 'Italian Virgil and the Idea of Rome,' Janus: Essays in Ancient and Modern Studies (ed. Louis L. Orlin), (Ann Arbor, Mich., 1975) 171-99, with Response by Charles Wittke, 201-3, and Discussion, 203-10.

Putnam's scrutiny of Georgics 2, 136-76 (Laudes Italiae) and the end of Georgics 2 (with pertinent epic passages) detects ambiguities in V's feelings about Rome as a political entity. Human nature's imperfections trammel and embarrass Saturnia tellus and the peoples of Italy. The same tension between order and disorder, evident in the symbolism of violence, suppressed or rampant, pervades the Aeneid. Putnam finds Vergil repeatedly preoccupied with the reality of power's misuse, the innocent Eden invaded and even militarized. Putnam's article challenges the 'idealistic' eulogy with disturbing ambiguities which, in his view, surface repeatedly in the 'natural' and 'human' setting.

THE AENEID: GENERAL STUDIES

38. E. N. Genovese, 'Deaths in the Aeneid,' Pacific Coast Philology 10 (1975) 22-8.

39. W. Ralph Johnson, Darkness Visible: a study of Vergil's Aeneid (Ithaca, 1975).

40. P. M. Martin, 'Le sillage d'Énée,' Athenaeum 53 (1975) 212-44.

41. Brooks Otis, 'Virgilian Narrative in the Light of its Precursors and Successors,' Studies in Philology 73 (1976) 1-28.

42. A. Perutelli, 'Commento ad alcuni sogni dell'Eneide,' Athenaeum 52 (1974) 241-67.

43. Charles R. Phillips, III, Italian Landscape and Peoples in the Aeneid: Birth and Death of a Nation. Diss., Brown University, 1974. Summary in DA 35 (1975) 7887A.

44. Kenneth Quinn, rev., W. S. Anderson, The Art of the Aeneid, CJ 69 (1973-4) 175-7.

45. Virginia Simpson, 'The Annalistic Tradition in Vergil's Aeneid,' Vergilius 21 (1975) 22-32.

Johnson's study of the Aeneid is versatile and sensitive; there are new insights into the craft of Vergilian poetry and keen awareness of the prejudices and the design of the creative genius. Martin provides a helpful commentary on Aeneas' ports-of-call. Otis's article is required reading, a brilliant notice of Vergil's indebtedness to past models, his uniquely original touches, and his exemplary role for posterity.

THE AENEID: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

46. Guillaume Stégen, Le Livre I de l'Énéide. Texte latin avec un plan détaillé et un commentaire critique et explicatif. (Namur 1975)

47. Adolf Blümel 'Die Lüge des Sinon,' Der Altsprachliche Unterricht 18 (1975) 56-67.
48. George Sanderlin, 'Aeneas as Apprentice — Point of View in the Third Aeneid,' CJ 71 (1975-6) 53-6.
49. Wilhelm Biermann, 'Infelix Dido: Entwurfeiner Curriculumsequenz,' Der Altsprachliche Unterricht 18 (1975) 37-55.
50. Niall Rudd, 'IDEA: Dido's culpa,' Lines of Enquiry: Studies in Latin Poetry (Cambridge 1976) 32-53.
51. U. W. Scholz, 'Eine Vergilszene im Lichte der Forschung (Aen. 4. 238 ff),' WüJbb. N.F. 1 (1975) 125-36.
52. A. Setaioli, 'Ancora a proposito della scena di magia nel IV libro dell'Eneide,' A&R 19 (1974) 159-64.
53. Michael Strain, 'Virgil Aeneid 4. 188-194,' PVS 14 (1974-5) 18-21.
54. H. Paratore, 'De Eryce atque Segesta vel potius Acesta apud Vergilium,' Latinitas 23 (1975) 201-9.
55. Zoja Pavlovskis, 'Aeneid V: The Old and the Young,' CJ 71 (1975-6) 193-205.
56. V. Pöschl, 'Die Tempeltüren des Dädalus in der Aeneis (VI. 14-33),' WüJbb. N.F.1 (1975) 119-23.
57. M. T. Bahr-Volk, 'Reality and Non-reality in Book Six of the Aeneid,' PVS 14 (1974-5) 16-8.
58. Robert John Forman, A Commentary on Vergil, Aeneid 10. Diss. New York University, 1973. Summary in DA 34 (1974) 422A.
59. G. Karl Galinsky (ed.), Perspectives of Roman Poetry: A Classics Symposium (Austin, Texas, 1974), 'The Originality of Roman Poetry: Panel Discussion,' 129-51.

Blümel's classroom exercise provides excellent guidance and a valuable bibliography. Sanderlin shows how Vergil balances Aeneas' weaknesses (dependency, homesickness, and doubt) with pietas in Aeneid 3. Rudd's brilliant study attributes Dido's disaster not to guilt but to her love of Aeneas. 'Whatever her deserts may have been (and I have argued that it is not easy to make a clear case against her) she did not deserve to suffer so cruelly.' The idea of divine sport recurs: As flies to wanton boys are we to the gods; They kill us for their sport. Strain detects moral implications in luxu (Aen. 4. 193) and alters Austin's version of facta atque infecta (Aen. 4, 190) to something approximating the Christian formula, 'sins of commission and omission'. Pavlovskis appraises the role of the old and the young in Aeneid 5 as an embodiment of the idea of the continuity of generations and as token of the historical process within which Aeneas (and the poet) finds himself. Bahr-Volk underscores the mood of ambiguity, uncertainty, and vagueness in the Sixth Aeneid. But the cumulative effect is meaningful: 'ambiguities clarify other ambiguities in a subtle paradox leading to a true view of reality.' Bahr-Volk suggests that Aeneas and Deiphobe leave by the ivory gate 'not because they are falsa insomnia but because they are like falsa insomnia; they must return to the Upper World to wander through a warped reality, unclarified by the Underworld and its manes.' The Austin Panel Discussion deals with the final scene of the epic.

THE AENEID: CHARACTERS

60. John Arthur Hanson, 'Aeneas,' Eight Essays in Classical Humanities (ed. G. S. Schwartz) (Milburn, New Jersey, 1975) 59-69.

61. Grace Starry West, Women in Vergil's Aeneid. Diss., University of California, Los Angeles, 1975. Summary in DA 36 (1975) 2800A-2801A.

Hanson's essay examines aspects of Aeneas which seem to impede his mission and contradict Jupiter's optimism. A comparison of Aeneas with Odysseus discloses marked differences between the heroes: in self-control, intellectual awareness, and sympathy with women. Aeneas, for Hanson, shows no maturation or change: he remains 'a man who lacks self-control, who cannot comprehend reality, and who cannot deal with the feminine half of human life.'

THE STRUCTURE OF THE AENEID

62. W. P. Basson, Pivotal Catalogues in the Aeneid (Amsterdam 1975).

THE TROJAN LEGEND

63. Gerhard Binder, 'Äneas', Enzyklopädie des Märchens: Handwörterbuch zur historischen und vergleichenden Erzählforschung (Berlin/New York 1975) Band 1, Lieferung 2, 510-28.

64. E. Weber, 'Die trojanische Abstammung der Römer als politisches Argument,' WS 85 (1972) 213-35.

Binder's encyclopaedia article examines the Aeneas legend from Homeric to post-Augustan times. His remarks, and bibliography, particularly relating to Nachleben, are useful.

THE AENEID: GEOGRAPHY AND ARCHAEOLOGY

65. B. Conticello, rev. G. Saeftlund, The Polyphemus and Scylla Groups at Sperlonga, Gnomon 47 (1975) 686-92.

66. J. Rufus Fears, 'Cumae in the Roman Imperial Age,' Vergilius 21 (1975) 1-21 (15 plates.)

67. W. Fuchs, 'Die Bildgeschichte der Flucht des Aeneas', Aufstieg und Niedergang der röm. Welt I, 4 (1973) 615-32 (32 plates).

Fears studies the Roman monuments on the Cumaean acropolis and in the Forum area. The common assertion that Cumae was a ghost town by Juvenal's time is clearly mistaken; Flavian and Antonine rulers infused new life and imparted a new monumentality to the venerable site. The Daedalic marvels of legend become a fresh reality. Fuchs compiles a rich portfolio of artworks relating to Aeneas' evacuation from Troy.

VERGIL'S LIFE AND WORKS

68. William R. Nethercut, 'Lord of the Scales,' CO 53 (1976) 51-4.

69. Michael Winterbottom, 'Virgil and the Confiscations,' G&R 23 (1976) 55-9.

Nethercut notes the coincidence of Saturn's aspects with important periods and events in the lives of Julius Caesar, Cicero, Augustus, Vergil, Horace, and Ovid. Vergil was born with the Sun in Libra and the Moon in Sagittarius, a combination significant for his life and his creativity. Winterbottom's restrained, uncomplicated review of the evidence for Vergil's displacement is welcome.

RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY

70. Richard Faber, Die Verkündigung Vergils. Zur Kritik der "Politischen Theologie" (Hildesheim 1975).

71. R. -F. Lebrun, 'La Notion du fatum dans l'oeuvre de Virgile', LEC 44 (1976) 35-44.

72. Robert E. A. Palmer, Roman Religion and Roman Empire. Five Essays. (Philadelphia 1974).

73. G. Radke, Die Götter Altitaliens (Münster 1965).

Faber's sophisticated study traces the impact of Vergilian thought and example in European conduct. Palmer's erudite essays treat, inter alia, Juno, as Rome's earliest goddess, originally a deity of youthfulness, not concerned with women; inscribed cippi unearthed at an 'incubation shrine' near Lavinium; the Fourth Eclogue; and di indigetes. Palmer's speculation regarding Punic traders in archaic Latium, with a possible emporium on the River Astura, will prompt fresh study of the presence of Anna, Dido's sister, in Aeneas' territory!

VERGIL AND OTHER AUGUSTAN POETS

74. Heinz Antony, Humor in der augusteischen Dichtung. Lachen und Lächeln bei Horaz, Propertius, Tibull und Vergil. (Hildesheim 1975).

75. G. Barra, 'L'Amicizia tra Virgilio e Orazio', Vichiana 2 (1973) 22-50.

76. Richard Minadeo, 'Vergil in Horace's Odes 4. 12,' CJ 71 (1975-6) 161-4.

77. Robert J. Ball, 'Tibullus 2.5 and Vergil's Aeneid,' Vergilius 21 (1975) 33-50.

78. J. P. Sullivan, Propertius: A Critical Introduction (Cambridge, 1976).

79. W. S. Anderson, 'The Heroides', Ovid (Greek and Latin Studies. Classical Literature and its Influence, ed. J. W. Binns) (London 1973) 49-83.

80. G. Karl Galinsky, Ovid's Metamorphoses: An Introduction to the Basic Aspects (Oxford, 1975).

Minadeo identifies the Vergilius of Horace, Odes 4. 12 with the poet. Ball indicates that Tibullus 2.5, inter alia, pays tribute to Vergil's epic by recollection of characterization, incident, and setting. Anderson's comparative study highlights the different worlds inhabited by Ovid's heroines.

STYLE, LANGUAGE, METER

81. M. von Albrecht, 'Die Gleichnisse und die Entstehung der Aeneis,' Grazer Beiträge 2 (1974) 1-6.

82. Paul T. Alessi, A Study of Furor in Republican and Augustan Literature Diss., University of Missouri, 1974. Summary in DA 35 (1975) 6117A.

83. Ward W. Briggs, Jr., Repetitions from Virgil's Georgics in the Aeneid. Diss., University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, 1974. Summary in DA 36 (1975) 293A.

84. J. -P. Chausserie-Laprée, 'Pour une étude de la structure phonique du vers: la clause de l'hexamètre,' REA 76 (1974) 5-28.

85. H. MacL. Currie, 'Symmetry, Poetry and Geography,' CB 52 (1976) 46-7.

86. M. Delaunois, 'L'explication de Virgile à la lumière de la recherche contemporaine,' LEC 43 (1975) 387-405.

87. Robert Joseph Edgeworth, The Uses of Color Terms in the Aeneid. Diss., University of Michigan, 1975. Summary in DA 35 (1975) 7279A.
88. Karelisa V. Hartigan, 'He rose like a lion . . .': Animal similes in Homer and Virgil,' AAnthung 21 (1973) 223-44.
89. John N. Hough, 'Monosyllabic Verse Endings in the Aeneid,' CJ 71 (1975-6) 16-24.
90. R. Jenneret, Recherches sur l'hymne et la prière chez Virgile. Essai d'application de la méthode d'analyse tagmémique à des textes littéraires de l'Antiquité. (Bruxelles 1973).
91. E. J. Kenney, rev., G. Highet, The Speeches in Vergil's Aeneid, JRS 54 (1974) 276-7.
92. I. Lana, La poesia di Virgilio (1974).
93. F. Minissale, 'Anfibologia di scrittura in Virgilio,' Helikon 11-12 (1971-2) 483-90.
94. Walter Moskalew, Verbal Repetition in Vergil's Aeneid. Diss., Yale University, 1975. Summary in DA 36 (1975) 3672A.
95. Joe Park Poe, rev., G. E. Duckworth, Vergil and Classical Hexameter Poetry, CJ 69 (1973-4) 172-3.
96. Hermann Raabe, Plurima mortis imago. Vergleichende Interpretationen zur Bildersprache Vergils. (München 1974) (=Zetemata, 59).
97. A. Sauvage, 'Le serpent dans la poésie latine,' RPh 49 (1975) 241-54.
98. Clifford W. Weber, Tmesis, Sandhi, and the two caesurae of the hexameter in Vergil's Aeneid. Diss., University of California, Berkeley, 1975. Summary in DA 36 (1975) 3674A.

Von Albrecht's study of the epic similes is brief but perceptive. Chausserie-Laprée's article grapples with the phonic architecture and sonorities of the epic hexameter. Currie reflects on symmetry as a constant feature of the phenomenal world, particularly in geography, and its effect on Vergil's creative genius and poetic organization. Delaunois examines extracts from Aeneid 4, 6, and 9, Bucolics 1, 3, 5, 9, and Georgics 1, 2, and 4. Hartigan's study of animal similes remarks that Vergil portrays the Trojans with images drawn from non-hostile animals, the Latin peoples as helpless creatures; lion similes are reserved for Aeneas' strongest opponent. Finally, Vergil uses animal similes (bullock, hunting ground) for Aeneas, 'domesticated' creatures for the 'civilized' hero. Tables detail the use of animal similes in Homer's epics and the Aeneid. Hough discusses monosyllabic verse endings in the epic, 138 in toto; Vergil employs them, however sparsely, to impart an imagery of power and the brand of his consummate artistry. Minissale studies ambiguity in the Georgics. Raabe studies poetic imagery in the context of death in the works of Vergil. Pages 63-141 contain an illuminating, immensely valuable study of the epic passages.

INTERPRETATION AND TEXT CRITICISM

99. D. Lau, Der lateinische Begriff 'labor'. (München, 1975).
100. R. D. Williams, 'Virgil, Eclogues 4. 60-63,' CP 71 (1976) 119-21.
101. T. E. V. Pearce, 'Virgil, Aeneid 1, 343f,' Eranos 72 (1974) 119-130.
102. D. R. Shackleton-Bailey, 'Editing Ancient Texts', Language and Texts: The Nature of Linguistic Evidence (ed. Herbert H. Paper) (Ann Arbor, Mich., 1975) 21-32.

Williams counters Fairclough, Saint-Denis, Geymonat and others and favours qui non risere parenti, 'those who have not smiled on their mother.' Pearce counters Mynors and adheres to the mss. reading ditissimus agri. Shackleton-Bailey translates lacrimae rerum (Aen. 2, 462) 'tears for things.'

COMPUTER STUDIES

103. Henrietta Holm Warwick, A Vergil Concordance. (Minneapolis, Minn., 1975).

104. E. D. Kollmann, 'The World of the Eclogues,' RELO (1974, 4) 1-24.

105. Wilhelm Ott, Rückläufiger Wortindex zu Vergil. Bucolica, Georgica, Aeneis. (Tübingen 1974).

106. G. P. Zarri, 'Une étude quentinienne sur la tradition manuscrite de la Copa,' RELO (1974, 1) 1-16.

Warwick's concordance, computer-based, is worthy successor (in most respects) to Merguet's Lexikon zu Vergilius (Leipzig 1912) and M. N. Wetmore's Index Verborum Vergilianus (New Haven 1911). The concordance is based on Mynor's OCT (Oxford 1969), but variants, conjectures, and doubtful passages are omitted. Ott's computer compilation will be indispensable to Vergilian scholars.

VERGIL AND EARLIER WRITERS

107. C. Corbato, 'Letteratura latina nella Gallia Transpadana,' Aquileia e Milano 'Antichità Altoadriatiche,' 4 (1973) 57-84.

108. N. B. Crowther, 'Parthenius and Roman Poetry,' Mnemosyne 29 (1976).

109. Diane Fowler Hatch, Telemachus and Virgil's Use of the Telemacheia in Aeneid 8 and 9. Diss., University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, 1975. Summary in DA 36 (1975) 293A-294A.

110. H. D. Jocelyn, rev. M. Wigodsky, Vergil and Early Latin Poetry, JRS 54 (1974) 272-3.

111. C. Kopff, rev. Schlunk, The Homeric Scholia and the Aeneid, CJ 71 (1975-6) 279-81.

112. Richard C. Monti, 'Studies in the Literary Tradition of Aeneid 4,' HSCP 79 (1975) 364-7 (Summary of dissertation).

ANCIENT AUTHORS AFTER VERGIL

113. G. Binder, 'Catilina und Kaiser Claudius als ewige Büsser in der Unterwelt. Eine typologische Verbindung zwischen Vergils Aeneis und Senecas Apocolocyntosis,' Acta Classica Univ. Scient. Debrecen. 10-11 (1974-5) 75-93.

114. C. Magazzù, 'L'Utilizzazione allegorica di Virgilio nella Psychomachia di Prudenzio,' BStudLat 5 (1975) 13-23.

115. William J. O'Neal, 'Vergil and Petronius: The Underworld,' CB 52 (1976) 33-4.

116. Robert A. Tucker, 'The Banquets of Dido and Cleopatra,' CB 52 (1975) 17-20.

117. Robert M. Wilhelm, 'Pliny and Vergil,' CO 53 (1975) 40-41.

O'Neal argues that Niceros' werewolf tale parodies Aeneas' descent into the Underworld. Tucker detects numerous similarities between Dido's banquets and Lucan's counterpart, Cleopatra's banquet for Julius Caesar. Wilhelm accents the Elder Pliny's admiration for Vergil (NH 3, 38ff., and Georg. 2, 136ff., Aen. 6, 851ff.); Pliny the Younger had Aeneid 2 in mind when he wrote his Vesuvius letters (Epist. 6, 16 and 20).

ANCIENT COMMENTATORS

118. Herwig Maehler, 'Ein Berliner Vergilfund: Lateinisch-griechische Handschrift aus Ägypten entdeckt,' Der Tagesspiegel (Berlin) 8. 1. 1976.

119. Donald E. Martin, Studies in the Editing of Latin Classical Authors in the Late Roman Empire. Diss., University of Cincinnati, 1975. Summary in DA 36 (1975) 2187A-2188A.

120. J. E. G. Zetzel, 'On the History of Latin Scholia,' HSCP 79 (1975) 335-54, especially 337-9 (Donatus, Asper, Servius).

The papyrus collection of the Egyptian Museum at Charlottenburg has disclosed fragments of a papyrus Codex containing a Latin-Greek text of the Aeneid. There are fragments from Aeneid 1 (notably 211-232, 276-297) and the beginning of Aeneid 2. The text appears in slender double columns which contain not verses but single words, or groups of words, with the Greek cursive version facing the Latin. The handwriting style dates ca. 350-380 A.D. "Der Kodex gehört zu den ältesten enthaltenen Vergilhandschriften." The Aeneid was translated into Greek by the libertus Polybius during the first century A.D. The West Berlin 'Tusculum' (or Loeb) version must have been designed for teachers (grammatici) or for general school use in the Eastern Roman Empire.

MANUSCRIPTS

121. I. Richmond, 'Quaeritur quomodo Appendicis Vergilianae poemata in unum convenerint,' RFIC 104 (1976) 26-30.

122. O. K. Werckmeister, rev. Erwin Rosenthal, The Illuminations of the Vergilius Romanus (Cod. Vat. Lat. 3867), CW 68 (1975) 472-3.

VERGIL AND LATER AGES

123. Michael Ayrton, A Meaning to the Maze (The Seventh Jackson Knight Memorial Lecture, May, 1973) (Abingdon, Berks., 1974).

124. H. MacL. Currie, 'Saint Augustine and Virgil,' PVS 14 (1974-5) 6-16.

125. Bernard F. Dick, 'The Wasteland and the Descensus ad Inferos,' Canadian Review of Comparative Literature 2 (1975) (Winter) 35-46.

126. Joseph Gibaldi & Richard A. LaFleur, 'Vanni Fucci and Laocoon: Servius as Possible Intermediary between Vergil and Dante,' Traditio 32 (1976) 386-397.

127. K. W. Gransden, 'The Value of Classics for the study of English,' Didaskalos 5:1 (1975) 47-58.

128. H. H. Huxley, 'Syphilides Musae: Fracastoro's Use of Virgil,' PCA 72 (1975) 16.

129. G. Wilson Knight, Jackson Knight: A Biography (Osney Mead, Oxford, 1975).

130. D. M. Kratz, 'Aeneas or Christ? An Epic Parody by Sedulius Scottus,' CW 69 (1975-6) 319-23.

131. Burkhard Spiecker, James Thomsons 'Seasons' und das römische

Lehrgedicht. (Erlanger Beiträge zur Sprach- und Kunstwissenschaft, Band 54) (1975).

132. David Thompson, Dante's Epic Journey (Baltimore, 1974). Rev. C. Kopff, CJ 71 (1975-6) 281.

133. O. Zwierlein, 'Karolus Magnus — alter Aeneas,' Lit. und Sprache im europ. MA. Festschr. K. Langosch. (Darmstadt 1973) 44-52.

Michael Ayrton, artist and sculptor, profoundly affected by the Maze and the Minotaur, delivered a remarkably original Memorial Lecture. His death in 1975 removed a great talent and rich testimony to Vergil's and Cumae's pervasive influence. Currie assesses the poetry of Vergil as a major influence on St. Augustine's mind and spirit. The Gibaldi-LaFleur article deals with Dante's use of Vergil's Laocoon episode (as explained by Servius) in his depiction of Vanni Fucci (Inferno 24-25). Gransden (48) issues a valuable summons: 'The best way to go on encouraging people to get something out of the Aeneid is to read it — at least sometimes and at least some of it — alongside passages from Spenser's Faerie Queene and Milton's Paradise Lost, vernacular masterpieces produced by men who were the products of a culture in which the Aeneid was not merely accessible but central.' Huxley's entertaining note treats Girolamo Fracastoro's De Morbo Gallico (Verona, 1530), a parody of Vergilian construction and digression. Wilson Knight's biography of his classicist brother is richly informative and a worthy memorial. Kratz examines a ninth-century parody, De quodam verbece a cane decepto, replete with mock epic narrative, planctus for the fallen ram, and an epitaph. Vergilian and Biblical allusions merge effectively and amusingly. Spiecker's study examines the influence of Vergil, Lucretius, and Ovid on Thomson's celebrated poem. Thompson's scholarly study relates the Italian masterpiece to ancient and mediaeval interpretations of the Odyssey and Aeneid. Dante's depiction of Ulysses reflects his own spiritual autobiography but the poet transforms his character into that of Aeneas, an anti-Ulysses.

A. G. McKay

McMaster University