

(VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY (1976-77

Author(s): A. G. McKay

Source: Vergilius (1959-), 1977, No. 23 (1977), pp. 55-69

Published by: The Vergilian Society

Stable URL: <https://www.jstor.org/stable/41591776>

JSTOR is a not-for-profit service that helps scholars, researchers, and students discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content in a trusted digital archive. We use information technology and tools to increase productivity and facilitate new forms of scholarship. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org

Your use of the JSTOR archive indicates your acceptance of the Terms & Conditions of Use, available at <https://about.jstor.org/terms>

JSTOR

The Vergilian Society is collaborating with JSTOR to digitize, preserve and extend access to Vergilius (1959-)

VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY (1976-77)

The present survey of Vergilian scholarship is the fifteenth in the Vergilius series. Classical World 68.1 (1974), published in association with The Vergilian Society, Inc., contains my 'Recent Work on Vergil: A Bibliographical Survey, 1964-1973.' The 92-page survey may be ordered either from the offices of The Classical World or from the Treasurer of The Vergilian Society, Inc. Addenda and subsequent surveys have appeared in Vergilius 19 (1973), 20 (1974), 21 (1975), and 22 (1976). The editor of "Vergilian Bibliography" welcomes reprints of articles and bibliographical notices for inclusion in the annual review. Kindly address the editor c/o Department of Classics, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada L8S 4M2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

1. Vincent J. Cleary, 'Aeneidea: Important Work on the Aeneid (1962-76) for Secondary School Teachers', Vergilius 22 (1976) 2-13.

2. Walter Donlan, ed., The Classical World Bibliography of Vergil. (New York 1977).

Cleary's bibliography, with helpful comments and assessments, offers useful service to teachers. Donlan's bibliography reprints earlier Classical World bibliographies (1940-73) as well as a bibliographical handlist on Vergil's epic.

EDITIONS, TRANSLATIONS

3. A. J. Boyle, The Eclogues of Virgil. Translated with introduction, notes and Latin text. (Melbourne 1976).

4. Robert Coleman, Virgil: Eclogues. (Cambridge Greek and Latin Classics) (Cambridge 1977).

5. R. G. Austin, ed., Virgil. Aeneid: Book VI. (Oxford 1977).

6. Rubén Bonifaz Nuño, Tiempo y Eternidad en Virgilio. La Eneida, Libros I-VI. (Mexico City 1976).

7. A. Díez Escanciano, 'Eneida, Libro VIII,' Perficet 7 (1976) 1-30.

8. K. W. Gransden, ed., Virgil: Aeneid Book VIII (Cambridge Greek and Latin Classics). (Cambridge 1976).

Boyle (3) offers an English verse translation of the Bucolics with exegetic notes and a factual and interpretative introduction suitable for the student of pastoral who has little or no knowledge of Latin. The text, edited and punctuated by Boyle, contains six different readings from Mynors' OCT (1972). Coleman (4) provides the text, with apparatus. Exegetical and critical commentary treats points of special interest with due attention to interpretation of contested passages. An introduction reviews the chronology and arrangement of the poems and treats the earlier history of the pastoral tradition with admirable compression. Coleman's excellent edition is the first to appear in English since the end of the 19th century. Austin's posthumous edition of Aeneid VI (a successor to Sir Frank Fletcher's edition, 1941) will be reviewed subsequently in Vergilius. Rubén Bonifaz (6) offers a thematic commentary on Aeneid I-IV with citations in Spanish and Latin. A. Díez Escanciano's article provides a translation with notes. Gransden's edition of the 'Augustan heart of the poem' provides a splendid introduction and detailed commentary on the text. Gransden is concerned with topographical matters, Vergil's sense of history, his typology and symbolism, literary style and his influence on subsequent vernacular poetry.

APPENDIX VERGILIANA

9. I. Kajanto, 'Who was Sabinus ille? A reinterpretation of Catalepton 10,' Arctos 9 (1975) 47-55.

10. M. D. Reeve, 'The textual tradition of Aetna, Ciris, and Catalepton,' Maia 27 (1975) 231-47.

ECLOGUES: GENERAL STUDIES

11. J. J. Jensen, 'Vergil's bukoliske muser,' Museum Tusculanum 20 (1973) 3-4.

12. A. Pennacini, Amore e canto nel locus amoenus: Teocrito, Tibullo, Virgilio. (Torino 1974).

13. E. de Saint-Denis, 'Encore l'architecture des 'Bucoliques' virgiliennes,' RevPhil 50 (1976) 7-21.

14. E. A. Schmidt, 'Arkadien: Abendland und Antike,' Antike und Abendland 21 (1975) 36-57.

15. John Van Sickle, 'Et Gallus cantavit: A Review Article,' CJ 72 (1977) 327-33.

Three general articles (11, 12, 14) explore familiar territory. Saint-Denis grapples gamely with the design of the Eclogue-Book; Van Sickle's review of David O. Ross, Jr., Backgrounds to Augustan Poetry: Gallus, Elegy and Rome (Cambridge 1975) offers useful asides on Vergil's ill-fated artist friend.

ECLOGUES: INDIVIDUAL POEMS

16. M. C. J. Putnam, 'Virgil's first eclogue; poetics of enclosure,' Ramus 4 (1975) 163-86.

17. R. Gustin, 'L'explication de Virgile,' LEC 45 (1977) 145-53.

18. Barry B. Powell, 'Poeta ludens: Thrust and Counter-thrust in Eclogue 3,' Illinois Classical Studies (ICS) 1 (1976) 113-21.

19. H. MacL. Currie, 'The Third Eclogue and the Roman Comic Spirit,' Mnemos. 29 (1976) 411-20.

20. M. Mayer, 'Quis fuit alter. En torno a Vergilio, Ecl. 3, 40,' Durius 2 (1974) 397-411.

21. Ciro Monteleone, L'egloga quarta da Virgilio a Costantino. Critica del testo e ideologia. (Manduria 1975).

22. I. Tumová, 'Antike Bearbeitung des Mythos von den vier Zeitaltern,' GLO 6 (1974) 3-46.

23. D. Ferrin Sutton, 'Father Silenus: actor or coryphaeus?,' CQ 24 (1974) 19-23.

24. J. Van Sickle, 'Virgil's 6th eclogue and the poetics of middle style,' Liverpool Classical Monthly (LCM) 2 (1977) 107-8.

25. M. Hubbard, 'The capture of Silenus,' PCPS 201 (1975) 53-62.

26. Ch. Neumeister, 'Vergils 9. Ekloge im Vergleich zu Theokrits 7. Idyll,' Dialogos, Festschr. Patzer, 177-85.

27. W. Gawantka, 'Zu Vergils neunter Ekloge,' Dialogos, Festschr. Patzer, 163-76.

28. J. P. Chausserie-Laprée, 'Échos et résonances au début de la dixième bucolique', Mélanges P. Boyancé, 173-80.

Putnam's suggestive article treats the elaboration and significance of Tityrus' setting in Eclogue I. 'For the first time in ancient pastoral poetry two intellectual worlds are in collision, seen in the characterization of two shepherds only one of whom is finally settled in a landscape of permanence and continuity.' (163). 'Two people remain momentarily near each other on the verge of a scenario landscape which continues for one and is relinquished by the other. Tityrus is shielded while Meliboeus is exposed, victim of political and ethical importunities which his fortunate colleague escapes.' (181). Gustin (17) treats Eclogue 1, inter alia, during his response to M. Delaunoy's earlier articles. Powell (18) tries to determine meaning and value in Eclogue III from the dynamics of its internal dramatic movement; in his view, the riddles (104-7) have no answers. Currie (19) argues that Eclogue III takes its rise from two Idylls of Theocritus but that Vergil also intended features in the Roman or Italian comic tradition to be evoked simultaneously. Mayer (20) follows Hermann's earlier hypothesis that Publius Nigidius Figulus, the Roman Neopythagorean, is juxtaposed with the Greek Pythagorean, Conon. Monteleone surveys the tradition and the interpretation of the Messianic Eclogue. Tumová (22) includes Vergil's approach to the Four Ages in his survey. Sutton, Van Sickle, and Hubbard offer distinct, but complementary studies of Eclogue VI. Chausserie-Laprée assesses the invocation to Arethusa (Eclogue X) as the last recreation of the pastoral domain and considers the complex design of phonic reverberations which are an important structural element.

GEORGICS: GENERAL STUDIES

29. P. Bubani, Flora virgiliana ovvero sulle piante menzionate da Virgilio (ed. H. M. Burdet). (London 1974).

30. J. M. Frayne, 'Subsistence farming in Italy during the Roman period. A preliminary discussion of the evidence,' G&R 21 (1974) 11-18.

31. J. M. Frayne, 'Wild and cultivated plants: a note on the peasant economy of ancient Italy,' JRS 65 (1975) 32-9.

32. Mervyn M. Keizer, 'The Structural Technique of Latin Didactic Poetry,' HSCP 74 (1970) 339 (dissertation summary).

33. James Everett Seaton, A Reading of Vergil's Georgics. Diss., The State University of Iowa, 1976. Summary in DA November (1976) 2850A.

34. Jan Hendrik Waszink, Biene und Honig als Symbol der Dichters und der Dichtung in der griechisch-römischen Antike. (Oplanden 1974).

Burdet's edition of Bubani provides a new preface, together with a biography and bibliography of Bubani. Frayne's articles, not strictly germane to the Georgics, nevertheless provide good insights into small-scale farming which was common during Vergil's lifespan. Seaton's dissertation assesses the Georgics as a poem of dialectic movement driven by unbearable tensions which are first sounded in Georgics I. The poem articulates a variety of responses to these tensions from beginning to end. Waszink's monograph (38 pages) bears on the Fourth Georgic.

GEORGICS: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

35. R. M. Wilhelm, 'The Second Georgic: The Sowing of a Republic,' Ziva Antika 26 (1976) 63-72.

36. Lidia Habermann, 'Varro and Two Military Similes in Virgil's Georgics,' CB 53 (1977) 163-91.

37. S. Lundström, 'Der Eingang des Proömiums zum dritten Buche der Georgica,' Hermes 104 (1976) 163-91.

38. Gary Miles, 'Georgics 3. 209-294: Amor and Civilization,' CSCA 8 (1975) 177-97.

39. J. Chomarat, 'L 'initiation d'Aristée,' REL 52 (1974) 185-207.

Wilhelm treats Virgil's adoption and expansion of Cicero's metaphor of the sowing of a republic in De Re Publica, 2, 5. Vergil redefines the Ciceronian res publica in terms of empire and describes how to sow a new civilization that will endure. 'Standing between the future Golden Age predicted in Eclogue 4.6 and the principate of Augustus described in Aeneid 6.791-794 as embodying all the qualities of the Saturnian age, the Saturnia regna are represented in this Georgic (II) as being an attainable reality with the proper application of cultus.' Habermann (36) finds Varronian inspiration in Georgics II, 276-84 and III, 339-48. Lundström reviews past explications of the prelude to Georgics III (1-48) and offers fresh insights. Miles (38) explores the significance of the Amor passage in the larger context of the Georgics. 'Humans also embody the elemental vitality which is the potential source of both creativity and destructiveness in animals.' (185) But there is no deep-seated despair: 'the very persistence of rustic life, and the husbandman's skill itself testify to the possibilities for renewal even as amor exemplifies the inevitability of decline.' (194). Chomarat finds analogues between the Aristaeus episode and Aeneas' descent in Aeneid VI. He argues that the Aristaeus episode is a poetic variation on the schema of initiation into a mystery cult.

THE AENEID: GENERAL STUDIES

40. Theodore M. Andersson, Early Epic Scenery: Homer, Virgil, and the Medieval Legacy. (Ithaca 1976).

41. I. Borszák, 'Heroisches Epos - unheroische Gesellschaft. Homer und Vergil,' Acta antiqua acad. scient. Hung. 23 (1975) 141-52.

42. K. Büchner, 'Vergil. Dichtung und Chaos,' Mélanges de philosophie, de littérature et d'histoire ancienne offerts à P. Boyancé (Coll. de l'École franç. de Rome XXII) (Rome 1974), 461-80.

43. Luca Canali, L'Eros freddo. Studi sull'Eneide. (Roma 1976).

44. J. C. B. Foster, 'Divine and demonic possession in the Aeneid,' LCM 2 (1977) 117-28.

45. R. Häussler, Das Historische Epos der Griechen und Römer bis Vergil. Teil I. Von Homer zu Vergil. (Berlin 1976).

46. Patrick Kragelund, Dream and Prediction in the Aeneid. A Semiotic Interpretation of the dreams of Aeneas and Turnus (Opuscula Graecolatina, 7). (Copenhagen 1976).

47. Robert B. Lloyd, 'Humor in the Aeneid,' CJ 72 (1977) 250-7.

Andersson, who is Professor of German Studies at Stanford University, examines 'Visible Space in Virgil's Aeneid' in a lengthy chapter (53-103).

Andersson argues that Vergil elaborated his Homeric model (latent space is characteristic) so as to project his action against a clearly delineated scenic backdrop while relating his characters to their surroundings in psychological terms. There is a special scenic affinity between the Aeneid and Beowulf but the visualizing tradition enters upon a sharp decline with the old French Roman d'Eneas and medieval romance generally. Büchner's article on contemporary disorder and its implications for the poet is useful. Canali's study of epic components is certain to excite a sharp response and strong antagonism. Foster's essay is perceptive and provocative. Kragelund (46) provides a useful and comprehensive analysis of Aeneas' and Turnus' dreams, their implications, Freudian and otherwise, and their artistic merit. Kragelund's language provides a suitably crepuscular atmosphere for the subject matter. Lloyd (47) detects humour of incident, of character, of conception, and of expression in the epic.

THE AENEID: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

48. J. Beaujeu, 'Le frère de Quirinus (A propos de Virgile, Énéide 1, 292 et de Properce, IV, 1, 9), Mélanges P. Boyancé 57-72.

49. Patrick E. Kehoe, 'Aeneas and the Libyan Harbor (1. 159-69),' CB 53 (1977) 71-6.

50. W. R. Nethercut, 'Foreshadowing in Aeneid 1. 751-752?', Vergilius 22 (1976) 30-33.

51. C. H. Craddock, Selections from Aeneid II. Handbook (Cambridge Latin Texts). (New York & London, 1976).

52. E. Narducci, 'Il tronco di Pompei (Troia e Roma nella Pharsalia), Maia 25 (1973) 317-25.

53. P. Boyancé, 'Virgile et Atlas,' Mélanges W. Seston, 49-58.

54. Page DuBois, 'The pharmakos of Virgil: Dido as Scapegoat,' Vergilius 22 (1976) 14-23.

55. R. J. Edgeworth, 'The Death of Dido,' CJ 72 (1976-77) 129-33.

56. G. B. Nussbaum, 'Empathy and reticence: some thoughts on Aeneid 4. 437-49,' LCM 1 (1976) 141-6.

57. D. S. Raven, 'A note on Vergil, Aeneid IV. 914,' Acta Classica 18 (1975) 147-8.

58. J. Axer, 'Haftowany płaszcz Eneasza (Wergiliusz 'Eneida' V, w. 250-257), Meander 29 (1974) 328-32.

59. Ward W. Briggs, Jr., 'Augustan Athletics and the Games of Aeneid V', Stadion (Journal of the History of Sport and Physical Education) 1 (1976-77) 267-83.

60. C. R. Phillips, III, 'A Note on Vergil's Aeneid 5, 744,' Hermes 104 (1976) 247-9.

61. L. Colucci, 'Facilis descensus Averno (Verg. Aen. vi, 126),' RIL 108 (1974) 180-95.

62. J. Heurgon, 'Le silence tragique de Didon (Énéide VI, 450-76),' Mélanges P. Boyancé 395-400.

63. B. H. Stricker, 'Tijd, Aeneid VI, 98sqq.,' OMRL 52 (1971) 71-5.

64. E. Szepes, 'Aeneas at the gate of the nether world,' AUB 1 (1972) 41-52.

65. P. Courcelle, 'Mille nocendi artes (Virgile, Aen. VII, 338), Mélanges P. Boyancé 219-27.

66. W. Görler, 'Aeneas' Ankunft in Latium. Beobachtungen zu Vergils epischer Technik,' WuJbb NF 2 (1976) 165-79.

67. G. Picone, 'Su alcuni elementi della realtà politica nell'Eneide,' Pan 1 (1973) 51-8.

68. Laurence R. Kepple, 'Arruns and the Death of Aeneas,' AJP 97 (1976) 344-60.

69. Panel Discussion, 'The Originality of Latin Poetry', Perspectives of Roman Poetry: A Classics Symposium (ed. G. Karl Galinsky) (Austin, Texas, 1976) 129-51.

70. George Thaniel, 'Nodum informis leti,' Acta Classica 19 (1976) 75-81.

Beaujeu associates Remus (Aen. I, 292) with M. Vipsanius Agrippa and argues for his installation in the Domus Augusti after 25 B.C. Kehoe, in an original fashion, senses that the harbour landscape is a composite of attractive and threatening details which prefigure the composite experience at Carthage. Nethercut assesses Aeneas as a second Memnon, as a hero in the image of Heracles (subduer of the man-eating horses of Diomedes) in connection with Aeneid I, 749-52. Both are prototypes of the character which Aeneas reveals later in the epic. Craddock's school text provides an introduction and commentary on selected passages from Aeneid II. Narducci introduces Priam's corpse (Aen. II, 554ff) in her study of Pompey's demise (Lucan, Phars. I, 685-6). Both symbolise the frailty of men and empires. Boyancé (53) suggests that Vergil regarded Atlas as the mythical expression of the celestial axis which assured the cohesion and rotation of the heavens (Aen. IV, 481f). DuBois treats the 'expulsion' of Dido from the city and Aeneas' departure, purified of passion and desire and freed from the trammels of love. Edgeworth recognises the wife of Hasdrubal (Polybius, 38.20; Appian, VII, 19, 131) as one of the models (with Medea, Ariadne, et al.) for Dido in Aeneid IV. Nussbaum examines the oak simile (Aeneid IV. 437-49) as a sample of Vergilian reticence, of the fusion of the external and internal perspective, with subtle reticent inflexions of empathy. Briggs (59) treats Homeric and Augustan elements in the games to provide historical and ideological perspective. Phillips detects a concern for the hero's private and civic past when Aeneas worships the Lar (=pietas) and Vesta (=securitas). Colucci (61) discounts Servius' equation of Averno with in Avernum in favour of the sense per Avernum, 'by way of Avernus'. Heurgon assigns prime importance to Dido in the celebrated passage (Aeneid VI, 450-76) which recalls the silence of Ajax (Odyssey XI, 541-64). Stricker associates the two doves of Venus (Aeneid VI, 98ff) with Delphi and with Judaic and oriental mythology. Szepes (64) recalls Apollo and Hecate as thyriaioi, protectors of the entry and of the city. Hecate is charged the surveillance of the territory which separates the quick and the dead in the realm of Orcus; Deiphobe, the Sibyl, is her prophetess and has to deal with the world of the dead. Courcelle notes that Christian literature of late antiquity often painted its demons after the image of Vergil's Allecto. Görler's treatment of Aeneas' arrival in Latium is concerned with technique, foreshadowing, etc. Picone suggests that the Trojan council in Aeneid IX reflects contemporary reality; the ultimate decision rests with a small élite, and demagogy is the resort of hotheads. Although Numanus is condemned for his hybris, the eulogy which he provides of Italic virtues reflects Vergil's admiration for the discipline and military qualities which characterised the landowning farmers of Vergil's age. Kepple (68) examines parallels between Camilla and Turnus (e.g., XI, 831, and XII, 952); their deaths are regrettable but ensure the advance of the cause of Aeneas and of Rome. An appendix treats Aeneid VI, 760-66 and the allusion to Aeneas' early death. The Texas Panel Discussion (69) refers to the last scene of the Aeneid. Thaniel treats Amata's suicide and the implications of death by hanging.

THE AENEID: CHARACTERS

71. T. R. Bryce, 'The Dido-Aeneas relationship: a re-examination,' CW 67 (1974) 257-69.

72. Paul F. Burke, 'Virgil's Amata,' Vergilius 22 (1976) 24-9.

73. Michael Fleck, 'Helena und Venus im zweiten Aeneisbuch,' Hermes 105 (1977) 68-79.

74. M. B. Revesz, 'Fidus Achates,' AUB 1 (1972) 53-8.

75. V. Schmidt, 'De rol van Venus in de Aeneis,' Hermen. 47 (1975) 114-26.

Bryce treats the nature of the relationship and the tragedy underlying the liaison between Aeneas and Dido. The tragedy lies in the relationship 'between two basically incompatible people — a relationship which . . . is meaningless and unproductive, and fraught with misunderstandings, suspicions, fears, resentment, and despair.' (269). Burke's study of Amata's character discloses her function as a scapegoat and accounts for her consistently improper behaviour and for her exceptional attachment to her would-be son-in-law whose death is intimately associated with her own. Fleck (73) examines Aeneid II, 567-88 with useful comments on the contested scene involving Aeneas with Helen. Revesz suggests that Agrippa lies behind Achates. Achates appears eleven times in Aeneid I and only ten times elsewhere. Vergil's underscoring of amicitia and fides may reflect Augustus' concern.

THE TROJAN LEGEND

76. T. J. Cornell, 'Aeneas and the Twins,' PCPS 201 (1975) 1-32.

77. M. Cruz García Fuentes, 'Eneas, Ascanio y los reyes de Alba,' HAnt 2 (1972) 21-34.

THE AENEID: GEOGRAPHY AND ARCHAEOLOGY

78. F. Cairns, 'Geography and nationalism in the Aeneid,' LCM 2 (1977) 109-16.

79. T. J. Cornell, 'Aeneas' arrival in Italy,' LCM 2 (1977) 77-83.

80. E. L. Harrison, 'Virgil's location of Corythus,' CQ 26 (1976) 293-5.

81. Nicholas Horsfall, 'Mr. Harrison and Corythus: A Reply,' CQ 26 (1976) 296-7.

82. R. M. Ogilvie, Early Rome and the Etruscans (Fontana History of the Ancient World) Vol. 1. (Berkeley & Los Angeles, 1976).

83. Richard E. Mitchell, 'Roman Coins as Historical Evidence: The Trojan

Legends of Rome', ICS 1 (1976) 65-85.

84. J. Perret, 'Problèmes topographiques au royaume de Latinus (Énéide VII-XII),' Mélanges Dion, (Paris 1974) 167-79.

The Liverpool Classical Monthly, edited and published by John Pinsent, Department of Greek, The University, PO Box 147, Liverpool L69 3BX, England, devoted an entire issue (LCM 2:6, 1977) to Vergilian studies. Cairns (78) brings fresh insights into a somewhat neglected area. Scholars have shown new enthusiasm for the poetic use of landscape but there are many facets to the subject. Cornell is highly sceptical of the Aeneas association with the tumulus burial recently excavated at Pratica di Mare (Lavinium). Harrison argues (contra McKay and Horsfall) that the traditional identification of Corythus with Cortona is supported and required by the Aeneid text. Horsfall, who favoured the identification with Tarquinii (post McKay, Vergil's Italy, Greenwich, Conn., 1970, page 81) re-asserts his conviction with additional remarks on Graviscae (the likely port of Tarquinii) and on Odysseus' connection as mythical hero with Cortona, a likely deterrent to Vergil's choice of the inland site. Ogilvie offers useful notes on the epic Etruscans, and Mitchell's numismatic study is a useful illustration of the Trojan legends of Rome. Perret treats the Trojan camp and Latinus' city and underscores the importance of Aeneas' establishment at Lavinium.

RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY

85. W. Fauth, 'Der Schlund des Orcus. Zu einer Eigentümlichkeit der römisch-etruskischen Unterweltvorstellung,' Numen 21 (1974) 105-27.

86. Eva Keuls, The Water Carriers in Hades. A Study of Katharsis through Toil in Classical Antiquity. (Amsterdam 1974).

87. P. M. Martin, 'Deux interprétations grecques d'un rituel de l'Italie protohistorique,' REG 85 (1972) 281-92.

88. Heinrich Naumann, 'War Vergil Epikureer?', Sileno (Rivista di Studi Classici e Cristiani) 1 (1975) 245-57.

89. W. Pötscher, 'Fatum,' Grazer Beiträge 2 (1974) 54-88.

90. I. Schatzman, 'Religious rites in Virgil's writings,' SCI 1 (1974) 47-63.

91. M. Swoboda, 'De dei notione et trium heroum erga deos mente in Aeneide descripta,' Eos 63 (1975) 61-73.

Fauth's article bears on the Vergilian picture of Hades. Keuls examines the punishment of the Danaids in the Roman tradition of poetry and art. Martin aligns Aeneid VII, 107f with Dion Hal. 1, 55, 1-3 and argues that the devouring of the tables is a misunderstood Mediterranean ritual. Naumann underlines Vergil's Epicurean traits and challenges some inert thoughts on the philosophical leanings of the poet. Schatzman discusses the epic value of ritual practices in the epic.

ROME AND AUGUSTUS

92. P. Goetz, Römisches bei Cicero und Vergil. Untersuchung von römischen Zügen und Bezügen in Ciceros De re publica und Vergils Aeneis. (Freiburg 1972).

93. J. Griffin, 'Augustan poetry and the life of luxury,' JRS 66 (1976) 87-105.

94. G. A. Mansuelli, 'La rappresentazione della città in scrittori latini dell'epoca di Augusto,' Littérature greco-romaine et géographie-historique. Mélanges offerts à Roger Dion (Paris 1974) 181-9.

95. D. Pietrusiński, 'L'apothéose d'Auguste par rapport à Romulus-Quirinus dans la poésie de Vergile et d'Horace,' Eos 63 (1975) 273-96.

96. K.-W. Weber, 'Troiae lusus. Alter und Entstehung eines Reiterspieles,' Ancient Society 5 (1974) 171-96.

Connections between Ciceronian and Vergilian political thought are profitably examined by Goetz. Griffin provides a valuable perspective on poetry and luxury as evidenced in Augustan writings and epigraphical notices. Mansuelli treats the image of the city in Vergil.

VERGIL AND OTHER AUGUSTAN POETS

97. E. Castorina, 'Il forte epos di Vario Rufo,' Poesia latina in frammenti. Miscellanea filologica (Geneva 1974) 213-221.

98. E. Flintoff, 'Lines 116-136 of Horace, Sat. II, 2,' Latomus 32 (1973) 814-7.

99. F. F. Luehr, 'Kometen und Pest. Exegetisches zu Manilius 1, 874-895,' WS NF 7 (1973) 113-25.

100. G. Petrone, 'Rivisitando l'ode de Archita (Hor. Carm. 1, 28),' Pan 2 (1974) 55-65.

101. A. Pieri, 'L'epodo 2 di Orazio e le Georgiche,' SIFC 44 (1972) 244-66.

102. V. Schmidt, 'Virgile et l'apogée de la louange de Cynthie (Properce II, 3, 23-32),' Mnem. 25 (1972) 402-7.

Castorina speculates on the epic artistry of Varius Rufus (cf. Vergil, Ecl. IX; Horace, Carm. 1, 6; Sat. 1, 10, 43), Vergil's poet friend and later his executor. Flintoff detects a pastiche of the Vergilian Bucolics in the mannered speech of Ofellus, the peasant. Luehr introduces Lucretius and Vergil in his analysis of comets and plagues in Manilius' text. Petrone accents affinities between the Archytas Ode and the Palinurus episode in the Aeneid. Pieri regards Epode II (with Georgics I, 458ff) as a compliment by Horace to a superior poet. Schmidt argues that Propertius II, 3 contains recollections of the Fourth Eclogue.

STYLE, LANGUAGE, METRE

103. Robert Craig Birss, "Imaginary Work": The Functions of Ekphrasis in Narrative Poetry. Diss., State University of Iowa, 1977. (Pre-publication abstract).

104. A. M. Bowie, F. Cairns, H. MacL. Currie, I. M. LeM. DuQuesnay, E. Fantham, J. C. B. Foster, E. L. Harrison, H. D. Jocelyn, et al., 'Topics in the Aeneid,' LCM 2 (1977) 129-43.

105. Francis Cairns, Generic Composition in Greek and Roman Poetry (Edinburgh 1972).

106. E. K. Borthwick, 'Nicetes the rhetorician and Vergil's plena deo,' Mnem. 25 (1972) 408-12.

107. J. Collart, 'Sentences et formules monostiques chez Virgile et Horace. Quelques remarques de métrique,' Mélanges P. Boyancé 205-12.

108. P. Courcelle, 'Intempesta nocte,' Mélanges d'histoire offerts à William

Seston (Paris 1974) 127-34.

109. J. T. Cummings, 'Media testudine: the portico with arch in pedimental tympanum,' AJA 78 (1974) 162-3.

110. E. Frank, 'Texture in Latin epic poetry,' CB 50 (1974) 69-72.

111. J. Gassner, Kataloge im römischen Epos. Vergil, Ovid, Lucan. Diss., München, 1972.

112. G. Ivănescu, 'Sur le vocabulaire pastoral du grec et du latin,' Actes de la XII^e conférence 'Eirene' (Amsterdam 1975) 159-67.

113. F. Muecke, 'Mixing of Genres in Augustan Poetry,' AULLA 15 (1973) 7.1-7.13.

114. William J. O'Neal, 'The Form of the Simile in Vergil's Aeneid,' CB 53 (1977) 76-79.

115. Ilona Opelt, 'I vezzegegiativi del linguaggio virgiliano e dell' Appendix,' A&R 20 (1976) 169-79.

116. J. Perkins, 'An Aspect of Latin Comparison Construction,' TAPA 104 (1974) 261-77.

117. A. Richmond, 'Symbolism in Virgil. Skeleton Key or Will-O'-the-Wisp?,' G&R 23 (1976) 142-58.

118. B. Segura Ramos, 'El adjetivo in -bilis /-e en Virgilio y en las 'Metamorphosis' de Ovidio: consideraciones métrico-semáticas,' Durius 2 (1974) 89-94.

119. B. Segura Ramos, 'Los sueños en la literatura latina. A manera de introducción,' Durius 2 (1974) 299-310.

120. A. Svennson, 'Perfectum aoristum,' Eranos 71 (1973) 112-9.

121. Bruno M. G. Tibiletti, 'Note venetiche,' AIV 131 (1972-73) 183-208.

122. José Gonzales Vázquez, La imagen en la poesía de Virgilia. Su función, estudio estilístico y literario. Diss., Granada 1976.

123. D. A. West, 'Virgil's Aeneid: after Knauer, Schlunk,' PCA 73 (1976) 21.

Birss' dissertation (chapter 2) examines three ekphraseis in the epic: Aen. I, 441-494; VI, 14-41; VIII, 608-731. They serve as images of the past, abandoned in the creation of the future, and of the roles of perceiver, creator, and of the poem itself. The Liverpool Colloquium treats similes, Aeneas as externus and the nostos theme, and viewpoints in the Aeneid, together with framing in Aeneid I, the name Amata and her mirus amor, and the end of the Aeneid. Cairns examines eutikton propemptikon as a genre in the epic (Aen. I, 65-75; 78-80; IV, 305-30; 365-87; VIII, 714-28). Cairns' book is the first major attempt to formulate a system of literary criticism for ancient poetry which is derived wholly from ancient evidence. Courcelle (108) treats intempesta nocte and its associations with great military action, criminal circumstances, and mystical experiences. Cummings' abstract treats the diffusion of a use of the vaulted arch, described by Vergil (Aen. I, 505-6) and depicted on the Arch at Orange. Muecke is especially concerned with Eclogue X. O'Neal studies Vergil's use of similes for variety, to mark subdivisions, for emphasis, etc. Opelt is concerned with Vergilian terms of endearment (carus, dulcis, cura etc). Usages in the Appendix Vergiliana are markedly different from those in the epic and suggest non-Vergilian authorship. Perkins indicates that 71 of the epic's 79 extended similes show verbal correspondence between simile and narrative. Symbolism and time relationship are explored by Richmond to good effect. They are a feature of Vergil's technique in matters relating to magic and religion, in reference to poetry and poets, in descriptions of works of art, in foreshadowing events in the poem or in Roman history, and in personal references to the poet in shepherd's guise in the Eclogues. Segura Ramos interprets dreams in Vergil as evidence of orphic-pythagorean or Platonic elements. The dreams of Aeneas and Turnus are examined most closely. Kragelund's superior thesis treats dreams in the light of Roman divination and explores light and darkness expressions with profit (supra, 46). Svensson demonstrates that Vergil uses the perfect for simple statement or description, to signify an abrupt start of an action, and for gnomic purposes. Tibiletti's onomastic research affects Nautes (Aeneid, V, 704, 728). David West (123) extols Knauer and Schlunk for achieving fascinating, vital and objective insights into great poetry.

INTERPRETATION AND TEXT CRITICISM

124. Barry Baldwin, 'Vergilius Graecus,' AJP 97 (1976) 361-8.

125. Gilbert Highet, 'A Lacuna in the Aeneid,' CP 71 (1976) 337-8.

126. P. Monat, 'Lactance comme témoin du texte de Virgile. Note sur Verg., Georg. 2, 341,' AC 43 (1974) 346-54.

127. J. Perret, 'Halaesus ou Messapus (A propos d'Aen. VII, 641-817),' Mélanges P. Boyancé, 557-68.

128. Martin Pulbrook, 'Eleven emendations in Latin poets,' Hermathena 120 (1976) 39-49.

129. Giuseppe Salvatore Romanelli, Interpolazioni e contraddizioni nel testo dell'Eneide, (Roma 1975).

Baldwin employs a Greek speech by the emperor Constantine which contains a version of much of the Messianic Eclogue in Greek hexameters in a review of readings in Eclogue IV. He combines the revised OCT of Sir Roger Mynors, the variant readings, the Greek versions and (where instructive) the ancient commentaries. Highet is concerned with Aen. VII, 373-405, more particularly with lines 393 and 395: 'They all left their homes. But others filled the air with shrieks. The logic is wrong.' Highet suggests that there is probably a lacuna in the poet's composition rather than in the manuscript tradition. Monat (126), with Lactantius and Servius, favours ferrea over terrea. Perret seeks to amend the confusion in the catalogue by aligning Halaesus (723-5) with Falisci (695-702), and by retaining Massicus, etc (725-32) aligned with the proper commander, Messapus (691-4). Pulbrook offers two emendations in the Georgics text: I, 513: invadunt spatia, and IV, 555: aspicitur (for aspiciunt). Romanelli's study of interpolations and contradictions in the Aeneid text is vitally important to future editors.

COMPUTER STUDIES

130. N. A. Greenberg, 'Line initials in Latin hexameter,' RELO (1975:1) 1-35.

131. E. D. Kollmann, 'Word Frequencies in Latin literature,' RELO (1973:4), 1-17.

132. P. Salat, 'Symétries et correspondances numériques dans l'Énéide,'

REL 52 (1974) 167-84.

VERGIL AND EARLIER WRITERS

133. L. Alfonsi, 'Dal teatro greco alla poesia romana,' Dioniso 42 (1968) 5-15.
134. Wendell Clausen, 'Virgil and Parthenius,' HSCP 80 (1976) 179.
135. G. R. McLennan, 'Arcadia before Vergil,' LCM 1 (1976) 135-7.
136. James N. O'Sullivan, 'An Unnoticed Reminiscence of Homer in Virgil,' AJP 98 (1977) 1-2.
137. E. Paratore, R. Verdière, 'Varron avait raison,' AC 42 (1973) 49-63.
138. W. Poetscher, 'Schicksalswägungen,' Kairos 15 (1973) 60-8.
139. E. A. Schmidt, 'Zwei Liebesgedichte Catulls (c. 7 und 51),' WS NF 7 (1973) 91-104.
140. A. Setaiolo, 'Un influsso ciceroniano in Virgilio,' StudIt 47 (1975) 5-26.
141. S. V. Tracy, 'Catullan Echoes in Aeneid 6. 333-36,' AJP 98 (1977) 20-23.
142. A. Traina, 'Matius fr. 7 Mor.,' MA 8-9 (1973-74) 203-7.

Alfonsi studies topoi in the Greek theatre and their appearance in Roman writings. He instances poverty as the teacher of the technai in Aristophanes' Ploutos and Vergil, Georgics I, 121ff. Parthenius was Vergil's tutor in Greek and also compiled a handbook of erotic tales for Cornelius Gallus. Vergil, according to Clausen, imitated Parthenius' verses in G. I, 437, and Aen. IV, 645-51. McLennan, pace Snell, argues that Vergil hardly promoted the status of Arcadia much further than its position in extant Hellenistic bucolic settings. He also notes that a recent bucolic papyrus (Page, GLP i. 123) provides Vergil's Silenus (Eclogue VI). Silenus is absent from Theocritus, Bion, and Moschus. O'Sullivan connects Odyssey IX, 481, 526ff., with Aeneid IX, 402ff, and X, 127-8. The correspondences associate Nisus the spearthrower with Polyphemus, the monstrous hurler of mountain peaks. Paratore and Verdière assess Varro as source for Vergil, Aeneid X, 469-71. Poetscher compares scenes from Homer's Iliad with Vergil Aeneid X, 725ff. Schmidt finds Catullian links with Horace and Vergil. Tracy finds Catullian echoes in Aeneid VI, 333-6; there are recollections of Catullus 46, 9-11 and Catullus 101. Catullus 101 is also recalled in Aeneid VI, 692. Traina finds a reminiscence of Gnaeus Matius, who translated Homer's Iliad into Latin hexameters, at Aeneid XI, 888.

ANCIENT AUTHORS AFTER VERGIL

143. L. Alfonsi, 'Tityrus christianus: una piccola aggiunta,' Sileno 1 (1975) 79-80.
144. Vinzenz Buchheit, 'Catull, Vergil, Martial und Stella in Plinius Epist. 9, 25,' SO 52 (1977) 83-7.
145. W. M. Calder, III, 'Seneca Agamemnon 766-768,' CP 69 (1974) 227-8.
146. Wendell Clausen, 'Juvenal and Virgil,' HSCP 80 (1976) 181-6.
147. G. K. Galinsky, 'L'Eneide di Ovidio (Met. XIII. 623 - XIV, 608) ed il carattere delle Metamorfosi,' Maia 28 (1976) 3-18.

148. P. A. George, 'Petronius De bello civili', CQ 24 (1974) 119-33.
 149. J. R. Jenkinson, 'Sarcasm in Lucan I, 33-66,' CR 24 (1974) 8-9.
 150. S. Koster, 'Vir bonus et sapiens. (Ausonius 363 p. 90 P.),' Hermes 102 (1974) 590-619.
 151. G. Puccioni, 'L'Ilioupersis di Petronio,' Argentea aetas, in memoriam E. V. Marmorale (Genova 1973) 107-38.
 152. E. Salemme, 'Un contributo a Lucano e a Petronio', P&I 12-14 (1970-72) 64-77.
- Calder's article explores relationships between Vergil, Aen. II, 557-8 (death of Priam) and Seneca, Agam., 766-8. Clausen examines reminiscences of Vergil in Juvenal's satires: Juvenal I, 155-7 and Aeneid II, 697-8; Juvenal I, 99-109 and Aeneid XII, 516-20; Juvenal III, 315-22, and Eclogues I, 79-83. George (148) regards Petronius' De bello civili as a Vergilian pastiche on a theme favoured by other post-Vergilian poets. Jenkinson aligns Phars. I, 33-66 with Georgics I, 24ff., and discards the notion of parody. Puccioni detects Vergilian and antiAsian style in the Petronian passage. Salemme connects the close of Georgics II with Phars. X and Phars. IV, 373-401.

MANUSCRIPTS

153. F. R. Cowell, 'Book production in ancient Rome,' HT 24 (1974) 794-8.
154. José Jiménez Delgado, 'Primera edición ilustrada de Virgilio (Estrasburgo, 1502),' Helmantica 23 (1972) 471-9.
155. L. Koenen, 'Neue Lesungen zu Kairener Urkunden und zu einem Vergil-Papyrus,' ZPE 11 (1973) 201-34.
156. M. Pulbrook, 'The third declension accusative plural in -is and -es in Ovid's Metamorphoses,' PACA 12 (1973) 2-10.

Cowell refers to the Edict of Diocletian as basis for his suggestion that a copy of the Aeneid comparable to the Codex Palatinus would have cost 3,500-4,000 denarii. Koenen discusses a new transcription of the Vergil papyrus with commentary and translation in Greek. He argues that the proper form in Aeneid I, 271 is moeniet (muniet). Pulbrook offers advice on the plural endings which bedevil Vergilian editors. 'Vergil's textual tradition is certain enough that we can be sure that most genuine -is spellings have been preserved in his poems. On Vergil's evidence, words preserve the same termination, whether -es or -is, throughout.' Ovid apparently adhered closely to Vergil's pattern.

VERGIL AND LATER AGES

157. James A. Anderson, Encina and Virgil. (University of Mississippi Romance Monographs, 8. 1974).
158. Priscilla Bawcutt, Gavin Douglas: A Critical Study. (Edinburgh 1976).
159. Pierre Brunel, L'Evocation des Morts et la descente aux enfers. Homère, Virgile, Dante, Claudel. (Paris 1974).
160. P. Courcelle, 'Littérature latine,' ACF 74 (1974-5) 549-51.
161. H. Macl. Currie, 'Virgil and Wordsworth - Affinities,' Latin Teaching 35:3 (1976) 45-8.

162. H. R. E. Davison (ed.), The Journey to the Other World. (London 1975).
163. Karsten Friis-Jensen, Šaxo og Vergil. En Analyse af 1931-udgavens Vergilparalleller (Opuscula Graecolatina, 1). (Copenhagen 1975).
164. N. Himmelmann, 'Lo bucolico en el arte antiguo,' Habis 5 (1974) 141-52.
165. H. H. Huxley, 'Querella Charontis,' Classical Folia 30 (1976) 226-7.
166. H. H. Huxley, 'A Reevaluation of Fracostoro's Poem Morbus Gallicus,' Proceedings, Pacific NW Council on Foreign Languages 27 (1976) 17-19.
167. Herbert H. Huxley, 'Dido Aeneae,' Vergilius 22 (1976) 23.
168. Herbert H. Huxley, 'QUAM BENE NOTA SUNT AUREA DICTA MARONIS? QUOD DEEST, ID SUPPLE; QUADRATAQUE VERBA VIDE-BIS,' Vergilius 22 (1976) 54, 64.
169. R. Katscher, 'Waltharius' - Dichtung und Dichter,' MLat/b 9 (1973) 48-120.
170. G. Wilson Knight, Vergil and Shakespeare (The Ninth Jackson Knight Memorial Lecture). (Exeter 1976).
171. W. Moench, 'Divo Virgilio. Hector Berlioz Trojaner. Eine musik-dramatische Interpretation der Aeneis,' Antiquitates Indogermanicae ... Gedankenschrift für Hermann Guentert zur 25 Wiederkehr seines Todes-tages am 23. April 1973 (Innsbruck 1974) 454-66.
172. A. Michel, 'Théâtre et télévision: Homère, Virgile, Pavese,' Bull. Budé 4,3 (1975) 413-8.
173. Mary E. Norton, 'Vergil and the Bicentennial,' CO 54 (1976) 18-20.
174. M. Okál, 'Martin Rakovský et ses sources antiques,' GLO 4 (1972) 33-122.
175. E. M. Olechowska, 'Le De Bello Gildonico de Claudien et la tradition épique,' MH 3 (1974) 46-60.
176. Kenneth J. Reckford, 'Some Trees in Virgil and Tolkein,' Perspectives of Roman Poetry: A Classics Symposium (ed. G. Karl Galinsky) (Austin, Texas, 1974) 57-91.
177. Berthold Friedrich Ringeisen, Manifestations of the Concept of Treachery in Major Works of Epic Literature. Diss., New York University, 1976. Summary in DA September (1976) 1534A.
178. W. Saupe, 'Gedanke über Vergils poetische Eigenart aus der Werkstatt eines humanistischen Dichters,' Helikon 11-12 (1971-72) 551-8.
179. Richard Wayne Alexander Seagraves, The Influence of Vergil on Petrarch's Africa. Diss., Columbia University, 1976. Summary in DA April (1977) 6462A.
180. E. Spiegelman, 'Wordsworth's Aeneid,' CompLit 26 (1974) 97-109.
181. H. J. Tschiedel, 'Orpheus und Eurydike. Ein Beitrag zum Thema: Rilke und die Antike,' A&A 79 (1973) 61-82.

Anderson's monograph examines Encina (1466-1529) in relation to Vergil. Bawcutt's volume discusses the original poetry and the translation of Vergil's Aeneid by Gavin Douglas (1475-1522). There is considerable new material in the biographical section, and in the assessment of his classical scholarship. Courcelle addresses new directions in research affecting Vergil's Nachleben. Currie finds many similarities in both poets: a comparable genius in taking close note of natural objects and transforming lucidly into words what was seen; a like sympathy for the humble, weak and suffering; a sturdy patriotism; and a veneration for duty and a sense of its place in the scheme of things. Douglas Bush's earlier article, 'Wordsworth and the Classics', UTQ 2 (1932-33) 359-79 still commands attention. Friis-Jensen studies more than fifty Vergilian parallels cited in the apparatus of the 1931 edition of the Gesta Danorum of Saxo Grammaticus. Himmelmann is concerned with bucolic themes in art and with Vergilian influence. Huxley's verses and word test are Vergilian appetizers; his study of Fracastoro's Morbus Gallicus is a fine reassessment of its merits and its indebtedness to classical models. Norton's article treats Aeneas' virtus and pietas as models for 18th century America and today. Saupe argues that Vergil the humanist has not yet been compromised by formal analysis. Spiegelman offers an analysis of Wordsworth's abbreviated version of Vergil's Aeneid with attention to special problems of translation. Tschiedel underlines Vergilian and Ovidian elements in Rilke's Orpheus and Eurydice.

McMaster University

A. G. McKay

THESAURUS LINGVAE LATINAE

Edited by the International Thesaurus Commission

"Thesaurus linguae Latinae", the most comprehensive Latin dictionary of the world, is an indispensable resource and working aid for philological and historical researches in the fields of classical philology, ancient history, theology, Romance languages and literatures. It has been published for more than 75 years by BSB B.G. Teubner Verlagsgesellschaft, Leipzig, whereas the International Thesaurus Commission is acting as scientific editor of that work. Today learned societies and academies from eleven European countries and one non-European country are represented in the Commission. Both the scientific editor and the publisher have made all necessary arrangements with a view to make sure that the work can be continued in the best possible way and completed within this century. The following volumes have been published up to now:

A to I	completely
L	I up to locus
M	completely
O	o up to oppugnativ

A detailed list of the volumes issued will be sent at the request of interested parties.

Please send your order to an international book-shop or to our publishing house.

LEIPZIG

BSB B.G. Teubner Verlagsgesellschaft

DDR – 701 Leipzig · Sternwartenstrasse 8

10.11.1976 Li.