

(VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY (1977-78

Author(s): A. G. McKay

Source: Vergilius (1959-), 1978, No. 24 (1978), pp. 62-76

Published by: The Vergilian Society

Stable URL: <https://www.jstor.org/stable/41591797>

JSTOR is a not-for-profit service that helps scholars, researchers, and students discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content in a trusted digital archive. We use information technology and tools to increase productivity and facilitate new forms of scholarship. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org

Your use of the JSTOR archive indicates your acceptance of the Terms & Conditions of Use, available at <https://about.jstor.org/terms>

JSTOR

The Vergilian Society is collaborating with JSTOR to digitize, preserve and extend access to Vergilius (1959-)

VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY (1977-78)

The present survey of Vergilian scholarship is the sixteenth in the Vergilius series. Classical World 68.1 (1974), published in association with The Vergilian Society, Inc., contains my 'Recent Work on Vergil: A Bibliographical Survey, 1964-1973.' The 92-page survey may be ordered either from the offices of The Classical World or from the Treasurer of The Vergilian Society, Inc. The same survey has been reprinted, along with earlier surveys compiled by George E. Duckworth, in The Classical World Bibliography of Vergil (ed. Walter Donlan), Garland Publishing, Inc., New York & London, 1978. Subsequent surveys have appeared in Vergilius 19 (1973), 20 (1974), 21 (1975), 22 (1976), and 23 (1977).

The editor of 'Vergilian Bibliography' welcomes reprints of articles and bibliographical notices for inclusion in the annual review. Kindly address correspondence to Professor A. G. McKay, Department of Classics, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada L8S 4M2.

EDITIONS AND TRANSLATIONS

1. E. Bernstein, Die erste deutsche Aeneis, Eine Untersuchung von Thomas Murners Aeneis Übersetzung aus dem Jahre 1515. (Meisenheim 1974).

2. C. Collard, 'Jeremiah Markland, 1693-1776,' Proc. Cambr. Philol. Soc. 202 (1976) 1-13.

3. J. V. Muir (ed.) Virgil. Selections from Aeneid IV. With a further selection from the English translation of C. Day Lewis. 'Cambridge Latin Texts'. (New York & London 1977).

4. J. Perret (ed.). Enéide. Tome I. Livres I-IV. 'Collections des Universités de France.' (Paris 1977).

5. J. Perret (ed.). Enéide. Tome II. Livres V-VIII. 'Collections des Universités de France.' (Paris 1978).

6. A. Petrucci, 'Per la datazione del Virgilio Augusteo. Osservazioni e propositi,' Miscellanea in memoria di Giorgio Cencetti (Torino 1973) 29-45.

7. M.-I. Rebelo Gonçalves, 'A propósito de Duas Traduções Portuguesas das Geórgicas de Virgílio,' Euphrosyne 7 (1975-6) 181-6.

8. G. Stégen, 'Le livre I de l'Enéide (Namur 1975).

Bernstein studies an interesting museum piece. Collard's sympathetic profile sheds light on an exceptionally fine editor of Vergil's texts. Perret's edition and translation of Aeneid 1-8 lacks lustre and falters alongside Geymonat's and Mynors' editions. Stégen offers a school text, as does Muir. The latter helps to enrich the growing Cambridge Latin Texts which have invaded the Secondary Schools of the English-speaking world.

APPENDIX VERGILIANA

9. G. Conti. Catalepton XI: Iusur letterario o autentico epitafio? (Perugia 1975).

10. L. Lehnus, 'Una scena della Ciris (vv. 220ss): Carme e l'Ecale di Callimaco,' Rend. Ist. Lombard. 109 (1975) 353-61.

11. R. O. A. M. Lyne (ed.), Ciris. A poem attributed to Vergil. 'Cambridge

Classical Texts and Commentaries 20.' (Cambridge 1978).

12. Heinrich Naumann, 'Ist Vergil der Verfasser von Catalepton V und VIII?', RhM 121 (1978) 78-93.

13. V. Sereni, 'Modo sit cum grata voluntas,' Scritti in onore di C. Vassalli (ed. L. Barbesi) (Verona 1974) 451-66.

14. G. P. Zarri, 'Une étude quentinienne sur la tradition manuscrite de la 'Copa', RELO (1974) 1-16.

15. N. Zorzetti, 'L'ironia della differenza. A proposito di Catull. 4 e Catal. 10,' AFLN 15 (1972-73) 29-54.

Lyne's new edition of Ciris is exemplary. The introduction and commentary provide a complete account of the poem: its manuscripts, style and language, poetic treatment of the myths, narrative style technique and method of composition. Lyne argues against Vergilian authorship and proposes a much later date of composition than has hitherto been supposed. Naumann grapples gamely with Catalepton 5 and 8, re-examines the Epicurean associations, but reaches no sure conclusion regarding authorship. Zorzetti, who accepts Vergilian authorship for Catalepton 10, regards it as a satirical reflection on Catullus 4.

ECLOGUES: GENERAL STUDIES

16. T. E. S. Flintoff, 'Characterisation in Virgil's Eclogues,' PVS 15 (1975-76) 16-26.

17. K. Garber, 'Vergil und das 'Pegnesische Schäffergedicht.' Zum historischen Gehalt pastoraler Dichtung,' Deutsche Barockliteratur und europäische Kultur. 2. Jahrestreffen des Internat. Arbeitskreises für deutsche Barocklit in der Herzog August-Bibliothek Wolfenbüttel, 28-31 August 1976 (Hamburg 1977) 168-203.

18. J. Juhl Jensen, 'Vergils bukoliske Muser,' MT 20 (1973) 3-4.

19. Rudolf P. -Kettemann, Bukolik und Georgik. Studien zu ihrer Affinität bei Vergil und später. 'Heidelberger Forschungen, Band 17'. (Heidelberg 1976).

20. F. Muecke, 'Vergil and the genre of Pastoral,' AUMLA 44 (1975) 169-80.

21. Ernst A. Schmidt, 'Der Bukoliker Vergil und die moralische Homerallégorie,' SO 53 (1978) 165-70.

22. Peter L. Smith, 'Respondent Omnia Silvae: Resonance in Vergil's Eclogues,' Humanities Assoc. Review (Canada) 28:1 (1977) 1-8.

23. J. B. Sodalow, 'Poeta Impotens: The Last Three Eclogues,' Latomus 36 (1977) 757-71.

24. A. Thill, 'Quellenforschung hier et aujourd'hui (à propos des Bucoliques de Virgile),' REL 53 (1975) 1-12.

Flintoff discusses three issues: the extent to which Vergil thought of each of the names of his shepherds as denoting one person throughout the cycle of poems; how, and to what extent, each of these names is given a character of its own (e.g., Menalcas); what if anything Vergil may have wished to achieve by giving each of these figures characters and achievements and sufferings of their own. The element of balance and contrast which characterisation provides accents alternative viewpoints on poetry and life. Muecke shows that the programmatic prologues of E. 1, 4, 6 and 10 combine allusions to Theo-critus with Vergil's own innovations in the genre. Solodow argues that the last three Eclogues are self-consciously concerned with poetry; Eclogue 8 implies the power of poetry; Eclogues 9 and 10, in different ways, affirm its importance. 'The pastoral refuge is not merely powerless and empty; it is also unsafe (771).

ECLOGUES: INDIVIDUAL POEMS

25. C. G. Hardie, 'Octavian and Eclogue 1,' The Ancient Historian and His Materials. Essays in Honour of C. E. Stevens (Farnborough, 1975), 109-22.

26. J. Moore-Blunt, 'Eclogue 2: Virgil's Utilisation of Theocritean Motifs,' Eranos 75 (1977) 23-42.

27. A. Barigazzi, 'Per l'interpretazione dell' Id. 5 di Teocrito e dell' Ecl. 3 di Virgilio,' AC 44 (1975) 54-78.

28. G. Petermann, 'Zum Weitstreit der Hirten in Vergils III. Eklogue,' Hermes 105 (1977) 202-8.

29. Charles Segal, 'Pastoral Realism in the Golden Age: Correspondence and Contrast between Virgil's Third and Fourth Eclogues,' Philologus 121 (1977) 158-63.

30. Stephen V. Tracy, 'The Nature of Vergilian Allusion; the Fifth Idyll and the Third Eclogue,' Humanitas III: 1 (1978) (The Ohio Classical Conference) 17-22.

31. W. Berg, rev. C. Monteleone, L'egloga quarta da Virgilio a Costantino. Critica del testo e ideologia (Manduria 1975), Gnomon 50 (1978) 208-10.

32. Ian M. LeM. Du Quesnay, 'Vergil's Fourth Eclogue,' Papers of the Liverpool Latin Seminar 1976 (ARCA Classical and Mediaeval Texts, Papers, and Monographs 2) ed. Francis Cairns (Liverpool 1977) 25-99.

33. D. Fehling, 'Ultima aetas et novus ordo (Verg. ecl. 4. 4f),' Monumentum Chiloniense. Studien zur augusteischen Zeit. Kieler Festschrift für Erich Burck zum 70 Geburtstag (ed. E. Lefèvre) (Amsterdam 1975).

34. A. Traina, 'Convexo nutantem pondere mundum (Verg. Ecl. 4. 50). Cosmologia e poesia,' Scritti in onore di C. Daino (Bologna 1975) 435-53.

35. R. Guerrini, 'Vos coryli testes. Struttura e canto nella V. Ecloga di Virgilio,' Rend. Acc. Naz. Lincei 370 (1973) (=1974) 1-12.

36. N. P. Alpers, 'Virgil: Eclogue IX,' Poetry 128 (1976) 143-5.

37. Stephen T. Kelly, 'The Gallus Quotation in Vergil's Tenth Eclogue,' Vergilius 23 (1977) 17-20.

Hardie assigns Bucolic I to 40 BC. Maecenas and Octavian supplanted Pollio after Bucolic 8 which Hardie dates accordingly to October 39 BC. Moore-Blunt accents Vergil's attention to the techniques of his poetic models, most notably Theocritus (Idyll 11). Tracy underscores similarities and differences between Idyll 5 and Eclogue 3. The close of the poem is surprising in light of the heavy indebtedness in form and substance elsewhere to Theocritus. The ending comes with the force of anti-climax and continues the mood of conflict and tension begun in Eclogue I. Berg's review of Monteleone is valuable for students of the textual tradition of the Messianic Eclogue. Du Quesnay's article offers a new interpretation of Eclogue IV that attempts to account for all the various elements in the poem. He dates the poem September 40 BC., and associates it with the wedding of M. Antonius and Octavia. The expected child and the new age of concord are foreseen as outcomes of the marriage. Horace, Epode 16, responds to Eclogue IV after the Brundisium Peace proved fleeting. The models are Theocritus, Idyll 17 and Catullus 64, and Vergil's poem is analysed according to the conventions of basilikon and epithalamium. Stylistic similarities of Theocritean poems, Catullus 64 and the Sibylline Oracles impress a unified tone and stylistic consistency on the Vergilian bucolic. Du Quesnay's essay is an extremely helpful study of the historical and literary background of this vexatious poem. Segal advances from E. 4, 42-4, and E. 3, 94-5 to argue that Vergil contrived a subtle comparison of bucolic and utopian details between the two Eclogues. Vergil signals a progression from small to great themes, from lowly pastoral realism to one of man's loftiest and most persistent myths. Kelly examines Eclogue 10, 46-9 and finds points of style and tone which mark the lines as a unit. Habitual usages, stylistics and inner unity suggest that vv 46-9 were quoted from Gallus.

GEORGICS: GENERAL STUDIES

38. Evelyn Ruth Faulkner, Allusion as Commentary. Vergil's Response in the Georgics to the De Rerum Natura of Lucretius. MA Thesis. Queen's University, 1975.

39. Lydia Habermann, 'Attitudes towards War in the Georgics,' CO 55 (1977) 3-4.

40. Patricia A. Johnston, The Golden Age in Vergil's Georgics. Dissertation, University of California, Berkeley 1975.

41. Eleanor Winsor Leach, 'Sedes Apibus from the Georgics to the Aeneid,' Vergilius 23 (1977) 2-20.

42. Michael C. J. Putnam, rev., V. Buchheit, Der Anspruch des Dichters in Vergils Georgika, CP 71 (1976) 279-82.

43. K. D. White, Country Life in Classical Times (Ithaca, New York 1977).

Faulkner's thesis highlights Vergil's poetic indebtedness to Lucretius and his philosophical independence. Johnston's doctoral dissertation shows how the concept of a golden age evolves in Vergil's works, from a 'metallic' age, based on freedom from toil, to an 'agricultural' age, which becomes 'golden' as a result of agricultural toil. The new concept, emergent in the Georgics, is confirmed in the epic. Leach shows that Vergil's bees are often placed in contexts involving the regeneration of men and kingdoms. But the implicit optimism attaching to the picture of the immortal bees is undercut: they become a figure by which to express regret for a potentially ideal world whose best promises are thwarted by the complexities of history. Vergil shares with his hero the desire to withdraw into the bee garden. But the swarm must advance towards the fatal light and a fame extending to the stars. Leach repeatedly stresses the inter-relationship of Georgics and Aeneid. K. D. White's anthology of texts and plates assembles evocative passage from Vergil and other classical authors to shed light on the countryside and country living.

GEORGICS: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

44. G. Augello, 'Divini gloria ruris,' Riv. Cult. Class. Med. 16 (1974) 136-63.

45. Will Richter, 'Lunae labores,' WS NF 11 (1977) 96-105.

46. G. Beltrani, 'Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas' (G. 2. 490),'

Ann. Fac. Lett. Napoli 3 (1972-73) 55-61.

47. Jenny Strauss Clay, 'The Argument of the End of Vergil's Second Georgic,' Philologus 120 (1976) 232-45.

48. R. Gandeva, 'Das Interesse für die Daker, Geten und Gelonen bei Vergil und Horaz und seine historische Grundlage,' Thracia II. Primus Congr. Stud. Thrac. (Sofia. Acad. bulg. des Lettres, 1974) 103-9.

49. D. Romano, 'Invidia infelix. Il significato dei vv. 37-39 del. 1. III delle Georgiche,' Pan, St. Ist. Filol. Lat. Univ. Palermo 3 (1976) 53-60.

50. Patricia A. Johnston, 'Eurydice and Proserpina in the Georgics,' TAPA 107 (1977) 161-72.

Augello treats Georgics I, 160-75 and detects mystical and symbolic values. Rome's imperium is indebted as much to the land as to military successes. There is an imprint of Orphic, certainly Eleusinian, spirit in the passage. Clay considers why Vergil interrupts his praises of country life with personal reflections on poetry and philosophy; a schema of the finale assists the argument. Gandeva detects imperial implications in the geographical allusions and some awareness of tribal distinctions. Johnston shows that Vergil not only changes the myth of Eurydice at the close of Georgic IV but also, at the start, the myth of Proserpina. Instead of being examples of resurrection, they now fail to return to life. In their place come important new advances in the technology sustaining human life.

AENEID: GENERAL STUDIES

51. L. Alfonsi & C. Vitelli, 'Tra Oriente e Occidente: voci vergiliane,' Aevum 50 (1976) 85-90.

52. M. Bonjour, 'L'Énéide, synthèse des deux patriotismes,' Terra natale. Etudes sur une composante affective du patriotisme romain (Paris, 1975) 465-583.

53. V. Buchheit, 'Vergilische Geschichtsdeutung,' Grazer Beiträge (1973) 23-50.

54. James P. Condon, 'Notes on T. S. Eliot's "What is a Classic?": The classical norm and social existence,' CJ 73 (1977) 176-8.

55. E. L. Harrison, 'Structure and Meaning in Vergil's Aeneid,' Papers of the Liverpool Latin Seminar 1976 (ARCA Classical and Medieval Texts, Papers and Monographs 2) (Liverpool 1977) 101-12.

56. J. Klein, 'The myth of Virgil's Aeneid,' Interpretation (The Hague, Nijhoff) 2 (1971) 10-20.

57. I. Lana, 'L'eroe epico e il mistero della conoscenza: un tentativo di lettura dell'Éneide,' Atti. Acc. Sc. Torino 108 (1974) 655-85.

58. Traugott Lawler, 'The Aeneid,' Homer to Brecht: The European Epic & Dramatic Traditions (edd. Michael Seidel, Edward Mendelson) (New Haven & London 1977) 53-75.

59. A. Thornton, Living Universe. Gods and Men in Vergil's Aeneid. (Mnemosyne Supplement, 46) (Leiden 1976).

60. P. G. Van Der Nat, Poeta Maximus, Enige beschouwingen over de receptie en beordeling van Vergilius/Aeneis in de Oudheid. (Rede 1976).

Condon's article explores the durability of Eliot's essay which bears heavily on Vergil's classic eminence. Harrison assesses Vergil's use of formal correspondence in the epic design to help solve some problems of interpretation. He is particularly concerned with Vergil's use of two related elements to point some significant development which they frame, with the second usually, though not necessarily, echoing the first in ring composition of the simplest kind. There are frames round the whole work on a divine and human level. Harrison interprets Aeneid 9. 375 haud temere/sc.esse. est visum as 'it seemed to be no mere accident' indicating that the moon's (Diana's) intervention seemed purposeful. Klein suggests that Vergil's version of the Golden Age is closer to Plato's Statesman than to Hesiod's Works and Days.

THE AENEID: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

61. K. M. Coleman, 'Vergil, Aeneid I, 200-201,' PACA 13 (1975) 9-10.
62. A. G. McKay, 'The Trojans at Carthage,' Humanitas 3:1 (1978) (Ohio Classical Conference) 15-16.
63. J. Romeuf, 'Les peintures du temple de Carthage (Enéide 1. 466-493),' ALMAr 2 (1975) 15-27.
64. K. Vretska, 'Vergil, Aeneis I, 1-7,' AU 20:4 (1977) 5-13.
65. Michael Fleck, 'Helena und Venus im zweiten Aeneisbuch,' Hermes 105 (1977) 68-79.
66. E. Kraggerud, 'Die interpolierte Helenaszene in der Aeneis,' SO 50 (1975) 105-20.
67. G. Stégen, 'Une grave décision,' LM 49-50 (1975) 1-5.
68. E. Römisch, 'Die Achaemenides-Episode in Vergils Aeneis,' Studien zum Antiken Epos (edd. Herwig Görgemanns, Ernst A. Schmidt) (Meisenheim-am-Glan 1976) 208-27.
69. G. Carlozzo, 'La Fama, divinità malefica, in Virgilio,' Att. Avv. Sc. Lett. Arti Palermo 32 (1971-73) 145-57.
70. Jane E. Phillips, 'Juno in Aeneid 4. 693-705,' Vergilius 23 (1977) 30-33.
71. U. W. Scholz, 'Eine Vergil-szene im Lichte der Forschung (Aen. 4. 283ff),' WJA NF 1 (1975) 125-6.
72. A. Wlosok, 'Vergils Didotragédie. Ein Beitrag zum Problem des Tragischen in der Aeneis,' Studien zum Antiken Epos (edd. Herwig Görgemanns, Ernst A. Schmidt) (Meisenheim-am-Glan 1976) 228-50.
73. J. Axser, 'Haftowany plaszcz. Eneasza (Wergiliusz, Eneida V, vv. 250-257),' Meander 29 (1974) 328-32.
74. H. Paratore, 'De Eryce atque Segesta vel potius Acesta apud Vergilium,' Latinitas 23 (1975) 201-9.
75. E. Christmann, 'Die Tod der Aeneas und die Pforten des Schlafes,' Studien zum Antiken Epos (edd. Herwig Görgemanns, Ernst A. Schmidt) (Meisenheim-am-Glan 1976) 251-79.
76. Raymond J. Clark, 'Vergil, Aeneid 6, 40ff. and the Cumaeen Sibyl's Cave,' Latomus 36 (1977) 482-95.
77. J. Heurgon, 'Le silence tragique de Didon (Enéide VI. 450-76),' Mélanges de philosophie, de Littérature et d'Histoire ancienne offerts à P. Boyancé (Roma 1974) 395-400.
78. E. H. King, 'James Beattie's Essay on the Sixth Book of Virgil's Aeneid (1790),' Aberdeen University Review 47:2 (No. 158) (Autumn 1977) 173-85.
79. E. Christian Kopff & Nanno Marinatos Kopff, 'Aeneas; False Dream or Messenger of the Manes? (Aeneid 6. 893ff),' Philologus 120 (1976) 246-50.

80. V. Pöschl, 'Die Tempeltüren des Dädalus in der Aeneid (VI. 14-33),' WJA 7 (1975) 119-23.
81. C. J. Fordyce, P. Vergili Maronis Aeneidos Libri VII-VIII (Edited by John D. Christie, with an Introduction by P. G. Walsh) (Oxford 1977).
82. T. S. MacKay, 'Three poets observe Picus,' AJP 96 (1975) 272-5.
83. F. William, 'Gates and Gate-Crashing,' Mnemosyne 30 (1977) 289-91.
84. L. Zurli, 'Come funzione il 'catalogo' virgiliano de Aen. VII. 647-817,' Materiali contributi per una storia della narrativa greco-latina (Perugia 1976) 121-137.
85. Carl R. Trahman, 'Vergil at the Forge,' Humanitas 3:1 (1978) (Ohio Classical Conference) 31-32.
86. D. A. West, 'Cernere erat: The Shield of Aeneas,' PVS 15 (1975-76) 1-6.
87. Peter G. Lennox, 'Virgil's Night-Episode re-examined (Aeneid IX, 176-449),' Hermes 105 (1977) 331-42.
88. A. Mazzaro, 'Lettura dell 'XI libro dell' Eneide, Parte I: Osservazioni critiche,' Colloqui di storia e letteratura, (genn. agosto 1975) 17-32.
89. M. Gigante, 'Il battello del poeta,' AFLN 15 (1972-3) 23-7.

McKay examines the ekphrasis (Aeneid I, 159-168) in the light of Pompeian landscape murals and nymphaea, the Venus-huntress figure, and the Julian colony at Carthage as a Vergilian reference. Romoëuf analyses the ekphrasis at Aeneid I, 466-93 as something less monumental than literary, and as prelude to the Ilioupersis which ensues. Fleck and Kraggerud are both concerned with the contested Helen episode in Aeneid 2, 567-88. Exclusion of the passage remains a personal prerogative of scholars and editors. Stégen shows how Vergil prepares the Trojans to receive the horse into the city. Phillips finds evocations of Juno Lucina (and Pronuba) in Vergil's goddess. Vergil's implication that Juno (through Iris) is acting in her character of Lucina at the close of Aeneid 4 are profoundly ironic. Wlosok's article on the Dido Tragedy is sound and directional. Christmann and the Kopffs are both concerned with the Gates of Sleep at the close of Aeneid 6. The latter is more instructive and original: Aeneas is not meant to be regarded as 'false' dream of a deceitful Roman and Augustan glory. However 'unreal' the vision, Aeneas returns as agent and messenger of the Manes with the mission to found Rome. Clark provides a background study to the relation between Apollo's temple and the Cumaean Sibyl's grotto. He examines testimonia, topography and text as they relate to the Sibyl's Cave. 'Vergil seems deliberately to have used ambiguity and uncertainty to cast a poetic unity over the whole scene. He thereby did with the topography what he does with tradition.' (483). Pöschl offers new insights into the complexity of the Daedalic temple doors. The University of Glasgow has published two of the books which the late Professor Fordyce (ob. 1974) had completed in his larger project of compiling a commentary on the entire second half of the epic. Peter G. Walsh supplies the introduction which analyses structural principles, leading themes and controlling purposes evident in both books. The commentary is magisterial and instructive even for the most jaded readers. MacKay studies Aeneid 7. 187-91 in association with Silius Italicus, Pun. 8. 439-42, and Ovid, Metam. 14, 291-6. Trahman considers the making of Aeneas' shield in Vulcan's forge and the shield itself. Trahman is especially concerned with 407-53, above all with the simile (408-13). Hellenistic etiquette and the heroic code favoured by Alexandrian critics of Homer prevent Vulcan from fashioning Aeneas' armour himself. The description of the finished artwork and its isolation from the actual manufacture again befits Alexandrian practice. West supports Eichholz's earlier stand: 'The illustrations on the shield of Aeneas are so presented that they bring vividly before our eyes illustrations which would be conceivable and effective on a metal shield.' The shield is round (clipeus); the scenes are deliberately (and suggestively) placed and are much more amenable to visual representation than the episodes in Aeneas' vision in the Underworld. Lennox reviews past conceptions of the night foray of Nisus and Euryalus. He is particularly concerned with Nisus' role in the adventure and finds reason for a more optimistic view of the episode than scholars normally support. William finds Juno's brusque, impatient behaviour at Aeneid 7, 618ff a marked deviation from the norm; divinities are usually treated to a miraculous Türöffnung. Juno's action bespeaks the fiend Discordia, the Ennian example for Vergil's vengeful goddess.

THE AENEID: CHARACTERS

90. R. P. Bond, 'Aeneas and the cardinal virtues,' Prudentia 6 (1974) 67-91.

91. Peter John Burnell, The influence of the traditional Roman idea of the hero on Virgil's Aeneas. Dissertation, University of Toronto, 1974.

92. W. W. De Grummond, 'Aeneas Despairing,' Hermes 105 (1977) 224-34.

93. T. T. Duke, 'Metabus of Privernum,' Vergilius 23 (1977) 34-8.

94. S. Farron, 'The Furor and Violentia of Aeneas,' Acta Classica 20 (1977) 204-8.

95. J. W. Jones, Jr., 'Mezentius, the Isolated Hero,' Vergilius 23 (1977) 50-54.

96. E. Christian Kopff, 'Dido and Penelope,' Philologus 121 (1977) 244-8.

97. Thomas Köves-Zulauf, 'Camilla,' Gymnasium 85 (1978) 182-205.

98. W. -L. Liebermann, 'Aeneas-Schicksal und Selbstfindung,' Studien zum Antiken Epos (edd. Herwig Görgemanns, Ernst A. Schmidt) (Meisenheim-am-Glan, 1976) 173-207.

99. Gary Miles, 'Glorious Peace: The Values and Motivation of Virgil's Aeneas,' CSCA 9 (1976) 133-64.

100. R. Villers, 'Durus Ulixes,' REL 54 (1977) 214-221.

Burnell shows that the stock Roman heroes that are used as examples of virtue by orators and poets have qualities very close to those Aeneas has at his best. But the ideal is only to be found in certain passages, where Vergil idealizes Aeneas, or when Aeneas struggles fitfully towards the heroic ideal. Duke examines the Camilla episode (Aeneid 11. 497-900), finds the Thracian King Harpalycus and his daughter Harpalyce, along with Metabus, found in Cato's Origines, formative factors. The misanthropic outlaw, lonely and embittered, is Vergil's literary creation and he disappears without comment when his role as Camilla's father has been fulfilled. De Grummond assesses the importance of the Diomedes reference in Aeneid 1, 94-101. Diomedes is to be regarded as Aeneas' heroic exemplum rather than Achilles. Farron is convinced that the epic was not meant to be an unqualified glorification of Rome and Augustus; Aeneas' actions in Aeneid 10. 517-60 contain ambiguous undertones. Jones treats the simile in Aeneid 10, 707-18 and argues in favour of a return to the manuscript tradition (contra Scaliger, Bentley, Heyne, Ribbeck, Geymonat, Mynors and Williams). Jones favours Servius' interpretation of 717-8 as applicable to Mezentius, scapegoat for the Etruscan nation, brutalized and separate from mankind. Kopff finds reverberations of and allusions to the Homeric framework of Penelope's story in the Dido account. Comparison with Penelope is helpful in understanding Dido's failure. Köves-Zulauf provides Part I of a major study of Camilla. Miles contends that the transformation in Aeneas' behaviour and outlook takes place before his ultimate destiny is revealed to him by Anchises; that it is a consequence of his own perceptions of the future, and reflects a consolidation of his own sense of values; and that it has important implications for our interpretation of the kind of peace which Aeneas and his spiritual descendants are to achieve. Villers associates Vergil's Ulysses with the post-Homeric tradition. Vergil emphasizes Ulysses' cruel streak in order to establish Aeneas as a hero entirely antithetical to the 'enduring' Ulysses.

THE TROJAN LEGEND

101. M. Pani. 'Troia resurgens: mito troiano e ideologia del principato,' Annali della Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia dell'Università degli Studi di Bari 18 (1975).

THE AENEID: GEOGRAPHY, ART & ARCHAEOLOGY

102. Samuel Carleton, 'A Seventeenth-Century Vergilian Emblem,' Bulletin, Class. Assoc. Pacific North West 8:1 (November 1977) 4.

103. Raymond J. Clark, 'Misenus and the Cumaean Landfall: Originality in Vergil's Use of Topography and Tradition,' TAPA 107 (1977) 63-71.

104. F. Coarelli, 'Sperlonga e Tiberio,' DArch 7 (1973) 97-122.

105. A. Geyer, 'Nero und Laokoon,' AA (1975) 265-75.

106. Marianne Goodfellow, Vergil and Transpadane Italy. MA Thesis, University of New Brunswick, 1977.

107. G. Moyaers, 'Enée et Lavinium à la lumière des découvertes archéologiques récentes,' Rev. Belg. de philologie et d'histoire 55 (1977) 21-50.

108. R. M. Ogilvie, rev. R. Hampe, Sperlonga und Vergil (Mainz 1972), CR 25 (1975) 158-9.

109. Derek Pearsall and Elizabeth Salter, Landscapes and Seasons of the Mediaeval World (Toronto 1973); chapter 1: Classical Traditions, 3-24.

110. G. Säflund, 'Il Germanico del Museo del Louvre. Proposte di identificazione e di interpretazione,' ORom 9 (1973) 1-18.

111. Bertha Tilly, 'Some Excursions into Vergil's Faliscan Country; In Search of Fescennium,' Vergilius 23 (1977) 39-49.

112. M. Winner, 'Zum Nachleben des Laokoon in der Renaissance,' JBerlM 16 (1974) 83-121.

Ogilby's second translation of the Vergilian corpus was published in 1654 in folio form. Carleton studies the plate accompanying the translation and associates the heavenly scene of apotheosis (Daphnis) with Charles I; the translation reinforces the interpretation that Daphnis is aligned with Caesar and with the executed Charles I. Clark argues that Vergil's inclusion of the Misenus-episode is a rehandling of tradition which created a special difficulty for the poet in terms of Cumaeon topography, and that Aeneas' visit to Cumae, like that of Misenus itself, is a further innovation to tradition. Coarelli states that the sculptures found in the cave at Sperlonga have no relation with Vergil's epic. Geyer notes Nero's preference for Trojan War stories and suggests that the Laocoon sculpture, lodged in the Domus Aurea, suited his 'classical' orientation. Goodfellow's thesis collects all Transpadane references, direct and indirect, in order to reassess the part played by boyhood memories in Vergil's poetry. Peculiarities of Transpadane flora, fauna, agricultural procedures, legends and natural phenomena are included in the study. Ogilvie's review of Hampe's Sperlonga und Vergil (Mainz 1972) corrects improper arguments and associations. Pearsall and Salter devote Chapter I (pages 3-24) to Classical Traditions, and include Vergil's Italy in their compass. Säflund assigns the 'Germanicus' statue by Cleomenes to M. Claudius Marcellus, heroised as Hermes Chthonios, and regards it as a posthumous portrait inspired by Vergil's poetic vision in Aeneid 6. Tilly grapples with the precise location of Fescennium (cf. Aeneid 7. 695-7) and favours Narce, 10 kilometres south of Civit  Castellana over Corchiano. Winner argues that the Laocoon reconstruction was based on Vergil and Pliny.

RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY

113. Raymond J. Clark, Catabasis: Vergil and the Wisdom Tradition. (Leiden 1978).

114. E. L. Harrison, 'Metempsychosis in Aeneid Six,' CJ 73 (1978) 193-7.

115. H. H. Huxley, 'Prayer in Epic with special reference to Virgil,' Bulletin, Class. Assoc. Pacific North West 8:1 (November 1977) 5-6.

116. Patricia A. Johnston. 'Vergil's Conception of Saturnus,' CSCA 10 (1977).

117. P. G. Walsh, 'Spes Romana, spes Christiana,' Prudentia 6 (1974) 33-40.

Clark's book assembles fragments relating to the 'Descent' theme from Near Eastern, Greek and Roman literature and cult to Vergil's time. He concentrates on the wisdom-tradition (rather than on the vegetation tradition) and emphasizes Vergil's originality in his use of the theme. Underworld myths, along with study of their locales, underworld geography, and ritualistic implications, provide fresh insights into Vergil's Aeneid 6. Harrison's article sheds new light on the doctrine of transmigration of souls which lies at the heart of Anchises' sermon and Aeneas' vision. Huxley's paper recalls that Vergil in his much-abused battle-scenes most effectively examines the way men petition the gods and in so doing achieves unsurpassed effects of pathos and tragic irony. Johnston's forthcoming article shows how Vergil's conception of Saturnus evolves from a rough equivalent of Hesiod's Cronus in the Eclogues, to the semi-historical, Euhemeristic figure described by Evander in Aeneid 8. Walsh examines the concept of hope with emphasis on Augustan writers, Apuleius, and Paulinus of Nola.

ROME AND AUGUSTUS

118. J. N. Felten, S.J., 'Virgil and Augustus: What the Poet Thought of the Politician,' Humanitas 3:1 (1978) (Ohio Classical Conference) 34-5.

VERGIL AND OTHER AUGUSTAN POETS

119. E. Burck, 'Die Rolle des Dichters und der Gesellschaft in der augusteischen Dichtung,' A&A 21 (1975) 12-35.

120. A. Cavarzere, 'Virgilio, Orazio e il "motto iniziale". Quarta Bucolica e sedicesimo epodo,' Atti. Acc. Patav. Sc. Sett. Arti 68 (1975-76) 35-42.

121. G. B. Conte, Memorie dei poeti e sistema letterario. Catullo, Virgilio, Ovidio. (Roma, 1974).

122. H. B. Evans, 'Winter and warfare in Ovid's Tomis,' CJ 70 (1975-76) 1-9.

123. Julia Haig Gaisser, 'Tibullus 2.3 and Vergil's Tenth Eclogue,' TAPA 107 (1977) 131-46.

124. R. Minadeo, 'Vergil in Horace's Ode 4.2,' CJ 71 (1975-76) 161-4.

125. A. Perutelli, 'Prima Ceres. Ovidius Amores III. 10. 11ff e Metam. V. 341ff.,' SCO 24 (1975) 179-89.

126. V. Pöschl, 'Virgil und Augustus. Dichtung im politischen Kampf,' Mélanges offerts à Léopold Sédar Senghor. Langues, littérature, histoire anciennes (Dakar 1977) 375-84.

127. H. Riikonen, 'The Attitude of Roman poets and orators to the countryside as a place for creative work,' Arctos 10 (1976) 75-85.

128. H. J. Tschiedel, 'Vergil und die römische Liebeselegie,' Lebendige Literatur. Dialog Schule-Wiss., Klass. Sprachen und Lit. 10 (München 1977) 120-55.

Evans shows that Ovid, Tristia 3, 10 relies on Vergil, Georgics 3, 349-83. Vergil's is an instance of the Scythian 'cold' topos, but Ovid's is a serious description affected by his own experience. Gaisser identifies literary allusion as an essential component of Tibullus' technique and shows that Tibullus 2.3 is an imitation of Vergil's Eclogue 10. But by an ironic juxtaposition of conventions, pastoral and elegiac, Tibullus acknowledges his imitation of Vergil and asserts his own position as elegist. Perutelli detects rhetorical and elegiac adaptations of Vergilian themes.

STYLE AND LANGUAGE

129. V. Bejarano, 'La filologia latina: objetivos y métodos,' Durius 3 (1975) 53-114.

130. W. M. Clarke, 'Intentional Alliteration in Vergil and Ovid,' Latomus 35 (1976) 276-300.

131. O. S. Due, 'Zur Etymologisierung in der Aeneis,' Classica et Mediaevalia F. Blatt septuagenario dedicata (eds. O. S. Due, N. Friis-Johansen, Larsen B. Dalsgaard) (Copenhagen 1973) 270-79.

132. R. J. Edgeworth, The Use of Colour Terms in the Aeneid. Diss., Michigan, Ann Arbor 1974. DA 35 (1975) 7279A.

133. E. D. Kollmann, 'A New Method of analyzing Latin Hexameter,' Scripta Classica Israelica 1 (1974) 64-72.

134. W. Moskalaw, 'Verbal Repetition in Vergil's Aeneid.' Dissertation, Yale University, 1975. DA 36 (1975) 3672A.

135. O. Otho Wingo, Latin Punctuation in the Classical Age (Hague 1972).

136. R. A. Zirin, The Phonological basis of Latin prosody (Hague 1970).

INTERPRETATION AND TEXT CRITICISM

137. G. Banterle, Osservazione dell'Abate Santi Fontana sui primi versi delle Georgiche di Virgilio,' Scritti in onore di C. Vassalini (ed. L. Barbesi) (Verona 1974) 67-82.

138. Paul Charles Burns, The Vatican Scholia on Virgil's Georgics. Text and Analysis. Dissertation, Toronto, 1974.

139. Julian Ward Jones and Elizabeth Frances Jones, The Commentary on the First Six Books of the Aeneid of Virgil Commonly Attributed to Bernardus Silvestris. (Lincoln, Nebraska, 1977).

140. R. Seider, 'Beiträge zur Geschichte und Paläographie der antiken Vergilhandschriften,' Studien zum Antiken Epos (edd. Helwig Görgemanns, Ernst A. Schmidt) (Roma, 1974) 129-72.

141. G. S. Romaniella, Interpolazioni e contraddizioni nel testo dell'Eneide (Aretusa: Collana di Filologia Class. e Archeologia, XL) (Roma 1975).

142. J. H. Waszink, 'Osservazioni sui fondamenti della critica testuale,' QUCC 19 (1975) 8-24.

Ward Jones and Elizabeth Jones examine the only allegorical commentary on the epic surviving from the Middle Ages. The authoritative, readable text is prefaced by an introduction where the editors discuss the origins of the commentary (and question the authorship of Bernardus Silvestris) examine ideas and cultural context, and provide an account of the manuscript on which their edition is based.

COMPUTER STUDIES

143. W. Ott, Metrische Analysen zu Vergil, Georgica. 1. Analysen und Übersichten. 2. Indizes (Materialen zu Metrik und Stilistik, 10-11) (Tübingen 1977).

VERGIL AND EARLIER WRITERS

144. G. Collard, 'Medea and Dido,' Prometheus 1 (1975) 131-52.

145. Anna M. Crabbe, 'Catullus 64 and the Fourth Georgic,' CQ NS 27 (1977) 342-51.

146. Ciro Monteleone, 'Catullo e "l'Odissea" dell' "Eneide"', Rivista di Studi Classici 24 (1976) 190-210.

147. A. Salvatore, 'Lucrezio e Virgilio. Note su l'espressione poetica,' Scritti in onore di C. Carbonara (Napoli 1976) 789-93.

148. D. F. Sutton, 'The Greek Origins of the Cacus Myth,' CQ NS 27 (1977) 391-3.

Crabbe is concerned with Vergil's use of the Theseus and Ariadne theme in the account of the Orpheus and Eurydice. The article examines compositional technique in the Aristaeus episode as a whole. Sutton provides a conjectural account of the origin of the Cacus myth. He suggests that the inspiration rested in Euripides' satyric drama Sisyphus (or something comparable) as adapted by Pomponius, the Republican playwright of Sullan times and master of literary Atellana.

ANCIENT AUTHORS AFTER VERGIL

149. R. Balzer, Der Einfluss Vergil auf Curtius Rufus. Diss. München, 1971.

150. P. Courcelle, 'Le banquet de Didon à Carthage et son retentissement littéraire,' Mélanges offerts à Léopold Senghor. Langues, littérature, histoire anciennes (Dakar 1977) 95-106.

151. P. Courcelle, 'Littérature latine: Le livre I de l'Enéide et la littérature latine d'époque chrétienne de Tertullien au XII^e s. Recherche sur l'Iconographie de l'Enéide,' ACF 75 (1975-76) 515-29.

152. P. Courcelle, 'Les lecteurs de l'Enéide devant les grandes invasions germaniques,' Romanobarbarica 1 (1976) 25-56.

153. Giovanni Cupaiuolo, 'Un locus vergilianus nell 'Anthologia Latina,' BollStudLat 6 (1976) 37-53.

154. J. Delz, 'Nec tu divinam Aeneida tempta. Textkritisches zu Valerius Flaccus, Statius, Silius Italicus,' MH 32 (1975) 155-72.

155. D. Joly, 'La bucolique au service de l'empire. Calpurnius interprete de Virgile. L'Ideologie de l'impérialisme romain,' Colloque organisé les 18 et 19 Octobre 1972 par la Section de Latin de la Fac. des Lettres (Paris 1974) (Publ. Univ. de Dijon, 46) 42-65.

156. C. Magazzù, 'L'utilizzazione allegorica di Virgilio nella Psychomachia di Prudenzio,' Boll. Stud. Lat. 5 (1975) 13-23.

157. R. C. Monti, Studies in the Literary Tradition of Aeneid 4. Diss. Harvard 1973. Abstract, HSPH 79 (1975) 365-7.

158. G. Nenci, 'Servius, in Aen. I, 367,' RivFil 105 (1977) 42.

159. E. Pasoli, 'La chiusa della satira III di Giovenale,' GB 3 (1975) 311-21.

160. U. Schindel, Die lateinischen Figurenlehren des 5. bis 7. Jahrhunderts und Donats Vergilkommentar (mit zwei Eidtionen) (Göttingen 1975).

161. A. Setaioli, 'I carmina epigraphica e tre poeti latini,' Prometheus 2 (1976) 67-77.

162. J. L. Vidal, 'Observaciones sobre centones virgilianos de tema cristiano. La creacion de una poesia cristiana culta,' BIEH 7:2 (1973) 53-64.

163. P. G. Walsh, 'Paulinus of Nola and Virgil,' PVS 15 (1975-76) 7-15.

164. Friedrich Werner, Nachahmung und eigene Gestaltung in der bukolischen Dichtung des Titus Calpurnius Siculus. Diss., Frankfurt-am-Main, 1976.

Cupaiuolo studies Anth. Lat. 223 (Riese), a poem of 21 hexameters assigned to an African poet (5-6 c. A.D.). Walsh argues that Vergilian allusions in Paulinus (ca. 355-431 A.D.), both words and techniques, were 'baptised' to serve a Christian purpose. The reflections of Vergil are a clear index to the nature of education in Bordeaux and are part of the well-stocked mind of the Christian writer. Delz refers to Vergil for explication of Silver Age poems. Pasoli's analysis of Juvenal 3, 315-322 involves a comparison with the close of Eclogue 1 and Horatian passages. Vessey compares Hannibal's shield (Silius Italicus, Punica. 2, 395-452) with Aeneas' shield to show how the ekphrasis objectifies central themes of the epic.

ANCIENT LIVES

165. J. Oroz, 'De las vitae vergilianae a la vida de Virgilio,' Perficat 7, 96 (1976) 109-49.

166. Ettore Paratore, 'Ancora sulla Vita donatiana di Virgilio,' Philologus 121 (1977) 249-63.

167. T. Agozzino, 'Secretum quaerere veritatis. Virgilio, vates ignarus, nella Continentia Vergiliana,' Studi classici in onore di Quintino Cataudella (Catania 1972) III, 615-30.

168. T. Alimonti, Struttura, ideologia ed imitazione virgiliana nel "De Mortibus Boum" de Endelechio. (Roma 1976).

169. I. Arias, 'Virgilio visto por Dante,' Romanitas 11 (1972) 265-77.
170. J. Blaensdorf, 'Aeneadas rursus cupiunt resonare Camenae. Vergils Epische Form in der Johannis des Corippus,' Monumentum Chiloniense. Studien zur augusteischen Zeit. Kieler Festschrift für Erich Burck zum 70. Geburtstag (ed. E. Lefèvre) (Amsterdam 1975) 524-45.
171. P. Boyancé, 'Jérôme Carcopino et Virgile,' Hommages à la mémoire de Jérôme Carcopino (Paris 1977) 35-7.
172. Robert P. Clarke, 'Varium et Mutabile Semper Femina,' Helios 5:1 (1977) 64.
173. P. Cugusi, 'In margine al carmen epigraphicum del Museo di S. Antio-co,' Epigraphica 37 (1975) 142-52.
174. H. MacL. Currie, 'R. S. Thomas and Virgil,' Latin Teaching 35:5 (1978) 14-17.
175. M. Cytowska, 'De Venantio Fortunato Vitae S. Martini auctore (Polish, with Latin summary),' Meander 30 (1975) 272-8.
176. Mark Davie, 'Dante's Latin Eclogues,' Papers of the Liverpool Latin Seminar 1976 (ARCA Classical & Medieval Texts, Papers and Monographs 2). (ed. Francis Cairns) (Liverpool 1977) 183-98.
177. Gennaro D'Ippolito, Trifiodoro e Vergilio; il proemio della "Presa di Ilio" e l'esordio del libro secondo dell'Eneide (Palermo 1976).
178. J. Doignon, 'Un récit de miracle dans les "Carmina de Nole. Poétique virgilienne et leçon apologetique,' Rev. Hist. de la spiritualité 48 (1972) 129-44.
179. L. Edmunds, 'Frost's fontes,' CJ 70:3 (1975) 26-37.
180. A. V. Ettin, 'Style and Ethics in the Pastoral Eclogues of Vergil and Spenser. Diss. St. Louis, 1972.
181. Charles Garton, 'How Usher Beverley took his leave of this world,' Didaskalos 5:2 (1976) 190-98.
182. K. Heisig, 'Zur frankischen Trojanersage,' ZRPh 90 (1974) 442-8.
183. H. H. Huxley, 'Nenia Mezentiana,' PVS 15 (1975-6) 27.
184. H. H. Huxley, Verba Quadrata, Vergilius 23 (1977) 20, 23.
185. Jan Kott, 'The Aeneid and the Tempest,' Arion NS 3/4 (1976) 424-51.
186. R. La Marca, 'I giuochi funebri di Iacobo Sannazaro,' SicGymn 27 (1974) 514-35.
187. Hugh M. Lee, 'Purcell's Dido and Aeneas: Aeneas as a Romantic Hero,' Vergilius 23 (1977) 21-9.
188. John R. Romano, 'Renaissance Readings of Vergil's Eclogues,' Humanitas 3:1 (1978) (Ohio Classical Conference) 28.
189. W. Schleiner, 'Aeneas' Flight from Troy,' Comp. Lit. 27 (1975) 87-112.
190. D. W. T. Vessey, 'Silius Italicus: The Shield of Hannibal,' AJPh 96 (1975) 391-405.
191. Robert M. Wilhelm, 'Vergil's Dido and Petrarch's Sophonisba,' Studies in Language and Literature (Proc. 23rd Mountain Interstate Foreign Language Conference (Richmond, Kentucky, 1976) 585-91.

Cugusi detects evidence of Vergilian quotations from a school manual; the grammar and prosody are faulty. Currie compares R. S. Thomas' twentieth-century poetry with Vergil's. Thomas' Wales and Vergil's Campania are worlds apart but there are common elements: the hortatory tone of an instructor or preacher, and a common religious atmosphere. The strains are Vergilian but Thomas has disclaimed Vergilian influence. Edmunds shows that several of Robert Frost's poems derive from Vergil's Georgics and Eclogues. Garton's study of a 17th century cento on the Resurrection of the Body shows that the learned cleric drew on Vergil's major opera, and oddly enough, on Mephaeus Vegius' Supplementum to the Aeneid. Garton provides a translation along with the Latin mosaic-work of the cento. Jan Kott detects Vergilian influence in Shakespeare's Tempest: both poets were concerned with a tempest-tossed hero, in search of a New World. Shakespeare was sensitive to the paradigm of the journey by sea and saw Everyman associations in the journey through penance to salvation and the attainment of the Promised Land. But Shakespeare not only invoked the Vergilian example, he challenged and finally rejected it. La Marca's article demonstrates that the funeral games of Iacobo Sannazaro were inspired by Aeneid 5 and Iliad 23. Lee's comparison of Nahum Tate's libretto for Henry Purcell's Dido and Aeneas (1689) with Vergil's poem sheds light on tastes and standards of both authors and their ages. Purcell wrote his opera for Josias Priest's Boarding School for Young Gentlewomen and employed Tate for the libretto. Tate provided a romanticized hero and heroine. Romano's paper noted that Renaissance English pastoral was dependent on commentaries provided to illuminate Vergil's frequently baffling text. Two approaches may be detected in the commentaries: allegorical and rhetorical. Renaissance English commentaries inspired two versions of pastoral, those of Spenser, and those of Sidney. Schleiner shows that Crashaw and Sidney stressed filial piety during the retreat from Troy, whereas late 17th and 18th century writers were more concerned with the domestic pathos attaching to Ascanius and Creusa. Emblem books and engravings support the thesis.

McMaster University

A. G. McKay