

VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY 1983-84

Author(s): Alexander G. McKay

Source: Vergilius (1959-), 1984, No. 30 (1984), pp. 44-60

Published by: The Vergilian Society

Stable URL: <https://www.jstor.org/stable/41591896>

JSTOR is a not-for-profit service that helps scholars, researchers, and students discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content in a trusted digital archive. We use information technology and tools to increase productivity and facilitate new forms of scholarship. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org

Your use of the JSTOR archive indicates your acceptance of the Terms & Conditions of Use, available at <https://about.jstor.org/terms>

JSTOR

The Vergilian Society is collaborating with JSTOR to digitize, preserve and extend access to Vergilius (1959-)

VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY 1983-84

The present survey of Vergilian scholarship is the twenty-second in the Vergilius series. Classical World 68:1 (1974), published in association with The Vergilian Society, Inc., contains my 'Recent Work on Vergil: A Bibliographical Survey, 1964-73.' The survey was reprinted in The Classical World Bibliography of Vergil (Walter Donlan, ed.), Garland Publishing, Inc. (New York & London 1978). Subsequent reviews have appeared in Vergilius 19 (1973), 20 (1974), 21 (1975), 22 (1976), 23 (1977), 24 (1978), 25 (1979), 26 (1980), 27 (1981), 28 (1982), and 29 (1983).

This compilation is indebted to the assistance and cooperation of Mills Memorial Library of McMaster University, the Robarts Library of the University of Toronto, the Library of the British School at Rome, and the Library of the Union Académique Internationale, Brussels. Offprints of articles and titles for inclusion in the annual Vergilius review were generously provided by readers, and scholars are once again invited to send material and suggestions to the editor of Vergilian Bibliography, c/o Department of Classics, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada L8S 4M2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

1. Juliette Ernst, Viktor Poeschl, William C. West, L'Année Philologique 52 (1981) [Paris 1983].
2. Alexander G. McKay, 'Vergilian Bibliography 1982-83,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 55-76.

VERGILIAN BIMILLENARY PUBLICATIONS

3. Luigi Bosio & Giovanni Rodella. Catalogo di opera a stampa di Virgilio dei secoli XVI-XVII-XVIII. (Mantova: Biblioteca dell'Accad. Nazionale Virgiliana 1981).
4. Catania. Congresso — La Fortuna di Virgilio nei secoli: Atti del Colloquium Vergilianum, Istituto universitario di Magistero di Catania, 19 maggio 1981 (Roma 1982).
5. Concilium Eirene XVI (Proceedings of the 16 International Eirene Conference, Prague, 31.8 - 4.9.1982), Volume 3.
6. E. Paratore. Itinerari Virgiliani. Raccolte di saggi promossa dal Comitato nazionale per le celebrazioni del bimillenario Virgiliano (Milano 1981).
7. Omaggio Sannita a Virgilio, ed. Antonio V. Nazzaro (S. Giorgio del Sanno 1983).
8. M. H. de Teves Costa Ureña Prieto. Ad publī Vergīlī Maronis diem exitialem bis millesimum celebrandum. 'Comemorações do bimilenário de morte de Virgílio: 19 a.C. - 1981 (Lisboa 1981).

Another exhibition catalogue has surfaced from the bimillenary celebrations in Italy and the Catania march-past of scholarly reflections on Vergil's Nachleben and the like adds further lustre to the poet's fame. Czechoslovakia marked the event with addresses appearing in Listy Filologické 106 (1983) and in Volume III of the Concilium Eirene 16 (1983); the Portuguese have offered a comparable tribute. Colloquia held in Mantua, Rome and Naples have yet to appear in print.

EDITIONS AND TRANSLATIONS

9. Virgilio, Georgiche. Trad. Luigi Canali, introd. A. La Penna. (Roma 1983).

10. Patrick Cheney, 'C. Day Lewis's Translation of Virgil's Aeneid: A "Living Contemporary Language," Comparative Literature Studies 20 (1983) 435-44.

11. Victor A. Estevez, 'Virgil's Aeneidean Repetitions Translated,' Humanitas (Ohio Classical Conference) 9:2 (1983-84) 29-35.

12. Robert Fitzgerald, transl., The Aeneid by Virgil (New York 1983); rev. George Steiner, Encounter (May 1984) 51-61; Paul Breslin, 'Waking up over the Aeneid,' Poetry (March 1984) 347-60.

13. Ettore Paratore (ed.), Luigi Canali (trad.), Virgilio: Eneide libri XI-XII (Roma 1983).

14. William Sotheby, (transl.), The Georgics of Virgil (London 1800); rev. John Quincy Adams (original criticism), Humanitas (Ohio Classical Conference) 9:2 (1983-84) 48-67.

15; L. P. Wilkinson (transl.), Virgil: The Georgics (Penguin 1982); rev. M.C.J. Putnam, CO 61 (1983-84) 69-70.

16. Robert Wells, (transl.), Virgil: The Georgics (Manchester 1982); rev. M.C.J. Putnam, CO 61 (1983-84) 69-70.

17. R. D. Williams (ed.), Virgil: The Eclogues and Georgics (Basingstoke 1979); rev. R. Coleman, CR 34 (1984) 29-31.

Cheney's assessment of Day Lewis's Aeneid is most favorable. Estevez finds that Mantinband (1964) is more faithful to repetitions than Copley (1975) or Mandelbaum (1971). Steiner's review of Fitzgerald's Aeneid is masterly; and Breslin's reflections on war, imperialism and the like in his assessment of Fitzgerald's version is engaging. John Quincy Adams's review of Sotheby's translation is an arresting museum piece.

APPENDIX VERGILIANA

18. M. Desport, 'Orphée dans le Culex. I: Orphée et la lune, Orphée au bois sacré,' Orphea voce (1980) 129-48.

19. E. Evrard, 'Quelques traits quantitatifs du vocabulaire du Moretum,' Latomus 41 (1982) 550-65.

Desport analyses Culex 117-20, and 268-95 and discovers traits of an Alexandrian aetiological poem on the origin of the sacred wood. Evrard provides a helpful analysis of the vocabulary of the Moretum.

ECLOGUES: GENERAL STUDIES

20. E. Coleiro. An Introduction to Vergil's Bucolics (Amsterdam 1979); rev. Robert Coleman, CR 34 (1984) 28-9.

21. Roland Mayer, 'Missing Persons in the Eclogues,' BICS 30 (1983) 17-30.

22. J. Van Sickle, 'Strutture interne di singoli egloghe nel libro bucolico di Virgilio,' Maia 35 (1983) 205-12.

23. James E. G. Zetzel, 'Servius and Triumviral History in the Eclogues,' CP 79 (1984) 139-42.

Mayer's article on missing persons assembles evidence for reliable identification of the unnamed dedicatee of Eclogue 8 (Pollio), and examines Vergil's manner of referring to friends and associates elsewhere in the Bucolic Book. Van Sickle provides a helpful analysis of the structure of the Bucolics with an up-to-date bibliography. Zetzel offers a critical assessment of Servius' misapprehensions about the dates attaching to Vergil's bucolic poems with vigorous corrections. Cicero probably never met Vergil and much less heard Cytheris reciting the Eclogues.

ECLOGUES: INDIVIDUAL POEMS

24. Wolfgang Hering, 'Form und Inhalt in der fruhaugusteischen Poesie,' ANRW II.30.1 (Berlin 1982) 181-253.

25. E. J. Kenney, 'The Key and the Cabinet: Ends and Means in Classical Studies,' PCA 80 (1983) 7-18 (espec. 11-12).

26. J. K. Anderson, 'Virgil, Eclogue 3, 92-93 - An Enquiry,' CW 77 (1984) 303.

27. L. Freyer, 'The riddles of Vergil's Third Eclogue,' Akroterion 26 (1981) 46-51.

28. Carl Springer, 'Aratus and the Cups of Menalcas: a note on Eclogue 3.42,' CJ 79 (1983-84) 131-4.

29. L. Beaujeu, 'L'enfant sans nom de la IV^e Bucolique,' REL 60 (1982) 186-215.

30. M. D. Northrup, 'Vergil on the Birth of Poetry: a reading of the fourth eclogue,' Studies in Latin Literature and Roman History III, ed. Carl Deroux, et al. (Bruxelles 1983) [Collection Latomus 180] 111-25.

31. E. Thummer, 'Vergilius ludens. Erwägungen zur vierter Ekloge,' Festschrift für Robert Muth zum 65 Geburtstag am 1 Januar 1981, Paul Händl, Wolfgang Meld edd. (Innsbruck 1983) 531-40.

32. S. M. Mizera, 'Lucretian elements in Menalcas' song, Eclogue 5,' Hermes 110 (1982) 367-71.

33. J. Perret, 'Daphnis pâtre et héros: perspectives sur un âge d'or (Virgile, Buc. V),' REL 60 (1982) 216-33.

34. L. Deschamps, 'Qui sont les Faunes dans le sixième Bucolique?,' Orphea voce (1980) 109-28.

35. M. T. Camilloni, 'Una lettura di Virg. Ecl. VII,' Sileno 5-6 (1979-80) 303-14.

36. F. Souchet-Daspét, 'De la description du paysage à la composition de l'espace du chant,' Orphea voce (1980) 177-223.

37. G. Nussbaum, 'Vergilian artistry: a note on Eclogues 8, 37-41,' LCM 9:6 (1984) 94-5.

38. F. Cupaiuolo, 'La decima egloga di Virgilio, un problema sempre aperto,' C&S 20 (1981) 50-59.

39. Toivo Viljamaa, 'Gallus - soldier or shepherd,' Arctos 17 (1983) 119-22.

Hering offers a structural analysis of Eclogue 1 (along with Horace, Serm. 2.1, and Odes 3.30; Propertius 1.7 and 8). Kenney's Presidential address to the Classical Association pleads for exactitude and a return to true philology in classical studies and examines Eclogue 1.1-2 (pp. 11-12). Anderson asks for observations on serpents and strawberries, or some other lurking place for vipers. Freyer regards the riddles of the Third Bucolic as original and appropriate. Springer treats the riddling and playful side of Vergil. Beaujeu favors an anonymous child in the Messianic Eclogue which signals a new generation deriving from the Roman aristocracy, a segment of society favoured later by Octavian-Augustus. Northrup favours another allegorical interpretation, and Thummer finds more humor than sobriety in the same verses. The Fifth Bucolic yields Lucretian echoes to Mizera's study. Perret dwells on Daphnis as a paradigmatic figure, representative of rural civilization, a non-allegorical pastoral hero, who guarantees peace and forecasts the Golden Age. Deschamps equates the fauns in Eclogue 6 with divinely inspired poets. Camilloni treats Epicurean principles, ataraxy and unobtrusive living, in the Seventh Bucolic. Nussbaum treats elision and hiatus as an emotional factor in Eclogue 8.37-41. Viljamaa regards Gallus primarily as an imaginative poet rather than as soldier or shepherd at Eclogue 10.44-49.

GEORGICS: GENERAL STUDIES

40. L. Castiglioni. Lezioni intorno alle Georgiche di Virgilio e altri studi [Testi classici 7] (Roma 1983).

41. H. Macl. Currie, 'Aristaeus, Pindar and Lucretius,' The Augustan Age 3 (1983-84) 26-37; PVS 17 (1978-80) 32-38.

42. Alberto Grilli, 'Agricoltura e poesia nelle Georgiche,' Atene e Roma 38 (1983) 4-20.

43. Krystyna Kreyser, 'La culture d'élevage des animaux dans les Georgiques de Virgile,' Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 25-31.

44. Gigliola Maggiulli, 'Virgilio eborista,' Maia 35 (1983) 105-14.

45. Giovanni Polara, 'Le Georgiche di Virgilio: tecnica compositiva ed elaborazione poetica,' Ommagio Sannita (1983).

Currie detects the influence of Lucretius and Catullus in the Aristaeus episode of Georgic 4. The irresponsible lust of Aristaeus derives from Pindar's presentation of Aristaeus' father, the amorous Apollo, in Pythian 9. Maggiulli's instructive article deals with medicinal plants and herbal remedies in Georgics 3.448-51; 4.264-80; and Aeneid 12.411-24.

GEORGICS: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

46. E. Maroti, 'Anmerkungen zu dem Proömium der Georgica "Vos, o clarissima mundi lumina,"' Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 32-6.

47. G. Puccioni, 'Esegesi Virgiliana: (a proposito del i. libro delle Georgiche,' Civiltà classica e cristiana 4 (1983) 15-42.

48. E. W. Leach, 'Georgics II and the poem,' Arethusa 14 (1981) 35-48.

49. Vittorio Ferraro, 'Il ciclo delle tre arature nella lingua rustica e nella versione di Virgilio,' Atene e Roma 38 (1983) 59-63.

50. M. Geymonat, 'Paesaggio drammatico ed esperienza biografica nella Sila virgiliana,' Storia e cultura del mezzogiorno. Studi in memoria di Umberto Caldora (Cosenza 1978) 9-20.

51. H. Grassl, 'Zur "Norischen Viehseuche" bei Vergil (Georg. III. 478-566),' RbM 125 (1982) 67-77.

52. M. Bettini, 'La follia di Aristeo. Morfologia e struttura della vicenda virgiliana al quarto libro delle Georgiche,' MD 6 (1981) 71-90.

53. Edwin L. Brown, 'The Astronomical Crux at Georgics 4.234,' AJPb 104 (1983) 384-90.

54. J. S. Campbell, 'Initiation and the role of Aristaeus in Georgics Four,' Ramus 11 (1982) 105-15.

55. A. M. Crabbe, 'Georgic IV and the Aeneid,' PVS 17 (1978-80) 10-31.

56. Riccardo Scarcia, "Pauca relict / iugera ruris" (nota a Georg. 4.125 sqq. e Hor. Carm. 2.15), 'Atena e Roma' 38 (1983) 63-7.

Eleanor Winsor Leach argues that fortunatus (= M. Terentius Varro) and felix (Geo. 2.490, 493) both denote Vergil's relationship with literary predecessors who were concerned with the voluptas attendant on a perception of order in the environment. Geymonat detects reverberations of the Calabrian ranges not only at Georgics 3.219, but elsewhere in Vergil's opera as well; there are even recollections in the epic. Grassl's article on the Noric plague is perceptive and helpful. Bettini's account of Aristaeus' epyllion is a competent review. Brown vindicates the astronomical accuracy of Vergil and emends Piscis (Geo. 4.234) to Pestis. Campbell argues that the Aristaeus scenario reflects the pattern of an initiation rite, similar to Isiac initiation described by Apuleius. The myth of Orpheus is regarded as the climax of Aristaeus's initiation, the pinnacle of enlightenment. Crabbe shows that the Aristaeus episode (or epyllion) subconsciously at the very least influenced Vergil during the composition of Aeneid 5 and 6. The Palinurus story draws freely on the fates of both Orpheus and Eurydice, and the preparation for Aeneas' catabasis develops details from Aristaeus' visit to his mother, Cyrene, and from the ultimate sacrifice in Georgic 4. Scarcia's comparative study of Georgic 4.127-8 and Horace, Odes 2.15 offers interesting sidelights on poetic usages.

AENEID: GENERAL STUDIES

57. E. Coleiro, 'Corrispondenza e parallelismi strutturali nella composizione tematica dell'Eneide,' Ricordo di Oreste Badellino 1896-1975, R. Avalone, ed. (Torino 1981) 133-41.

58. F. Della Corte, 'Spazio/tempo narrativo nell'Eneide,' MCSN 3 (1981) 15-26.

59. Robert J. Edgeworth, 'The Purple Flower Image in the Aeneid,' Philologus 127 (1983) 143-8.

60. Hermann Funke, 'Sunt lacrimae rerum: Ideologie und Komposition in Vergils Aeneis,' Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 19-24.

61. Daniel Gillis, Eros and Death in the Aeneid (Roma 1983).

62. Enrico Flores, 'L'Eneide, "lo spirito del tempo" e Virgilio,' Omaggio Sannita (1983).

63. P. R. Hardie, 'Some themes from Gigantomachy in the Aeneid,' Hermes 111 (1983) 311-26.

64. H. -O Kröner, 'De Vergilio poeta,' Vox Latina 18 (1982) 350-56.

65. Herbert H. Huxley, 'A palindromic square from the Aeneid,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 51, 76 (solution).

66. Donald H. Mills, "'Sacred Space" in Vergil's Aeneid,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 34-46.

67. Richard C. Monti, The Dido Episode and the Aeneid: Roman Social and Political Values in the Epic (Leiden 1981); rev. M.C.J. Putnam, CP 79

(1984) 72-6.

68. R. G. M. Nisbet, 'Aeneas Imperator: Roman Generalship in an Epic Context,' PVS 17 (1978-80) 50-61; The Augustan Age 3 (1983-84) 55-72.

69. W. Pötscher, 'Motivationsprobleme bei Vergil,' Festschrift Muth (cf. 31) 361-74.

70. P. Romanelli, 'Riflessi virgiliani dei rapporti tra Roma e l'Africa,' In Africa e a Roma: Scripta minora selecta (Roma 1981) 609-30.

71. W. J. N. Rudd, 'The Idea of Empire in the Aeneid,' Hermathena 134 (1983) 35-50.

72. B. Schlerath, 'Culinaria Romano-Germanica,' Logos Semantikos. Studia Linguistica in honorem Eugenio Conseriu 1921-1981, H. Geckeler ed., et al. (Berlin, Madrid 1981) Vol. III. 269-87.

73. Gordon Williams, Technique and Ideas in the Aeneid (London, New Haven 1983); rev. Fred Robertson, G&R 31 (1984) 86-7; Roland Mayer, CR 34 (1984) 31-33; John E. Rexine, Vergilius 29 (1983) 78-80.

74. R. D. Williams, 'Virgil and Rome,' The Augustan Age 3 (1983-84) 95-108; PVS 17 (1978-80) 1-9.

Edgeworth deals with the six appearances of the purple flower image in the epic; five are connected with the death of a major character or sympathetic figure; the final instance (Aeneid 12.319) features a miraculous restoration. Vergil seems to provide an aetiology for existing ritual practices (Vio-laria, Rosalia/Rosaria, and Parentalia) which involved casting flowers on graves. Funke's brief address challenges stale conceptions and pleads for bolder, more original criticism of the ideology and composition of the epic. Gillis's study of Eros and Death is a bracing interpretation of the epic along Freudian and Jungian lines, with some address also to Hindu sources. The undertones, ambiguities and latent excitement of Vergil's poetry are a constant concern in Gillis's reflections on the marriage at Carthage, Pallas and Aeneas, Aeneas and Turnus, and Eros and Politics. But the arguments and interpretations will repel more conservative tastes: e.g., 'With the pax Romana, perhaps the human hemorrhage at Rome could finally be staunch-ed, and Roman semen be put to the more productive use for which it was ordained' (p. 144). Hardie finds that gigantomachy themes are present at important points in the epic: the storm (Aeneid 1); the Gauls on the Capitol, and Actium, on Aeneas' Shield (Aeneid 8). Mills applies Eliade's notion of sacred space as an interpretive tool for understanding the epic. According to Mills, the concept is central to the poem's thematic movement and meaning. Monti's study of the Dido Episode wins praise from Putnam for its originality and fresh departures. Nisbet likens the epic to a great novel of war and politics. The emperor finally wins his spolia opima from the defeated Turnus, but his supreme command has eluded him. Seneca's injunction — imperare sibi maximum imperium est (Epist. 113.30) — finds no fulfillment in Aeneas. Romanelli's earlier article is a valuable commentary on Vergil's attachment to North Africa. Rudd contends that 'the force of the Homeric tradition, combined with Vergil's own tragic insight, prevented him from composing a clear, ringing celebration of Roman superiority' (p. 49). Schlerath reviews four Vergilian banquet scenes and treats their reappearance in later ages. The merits of Gordon Williams's study of Vergilian technique and ideas in the epic continue to excite comment. Deryck Williams's address on Virgil and Rome exhibits his usual common sense and sensitivity on matters of major consequence.

AENEID: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

75. David Z. Crookes, 'A note on the gold in Aeneid 1,' LCM 9 (1984) 14-6.

76. Luis A. Losada, 'Maple, Fir and Pine: Vergil's Wooden Horse,' TAPA 113 (1983) 301-10.

77. F. F. Schwarz, 'Fumat Neptunia Troia. Feuerzeichensprache im zweiten Buch des Aeneis,' Festschrift Muth (cf. 31) 443-61.

78. Marianne Wifstrand Schiebe, 'Der Black-out des Aeneas (Zur Frage der Diskrepanz zwischen zweitem und drittem Buch der Aeneis),' Eranos 81 (1983) 113-6.

79. J. Cressey, 'A nice derangement of epitaphs: Vergil Aeneid 3.714,' LCM 8 (1983) 64.

80. Auguste Haury, 'La faute de Didon: "Extremum hunc, Arethusa, mihi concede laborem" (Ecl. X.1),' REA 83: 3-4 (1981) 227-54.

81. T. E. Kinsey, 'Virgil, Aeneid IV 435-6,' Maia 35 (1983) 29-30.

82. Gabriela Cretia, 'Un schema narratif archaïque dans l'Enéide,' Studii clasice 22 (1984) 41-3.

83. T. E. V. Pearce, 'The Tomb by the Sea: The History of a Motif,' Latomus 42 (1983) 110-15.

84. P. Cambronne, 'Note sur le catalogue des hommes politiques dans le discours d'Anchise (Virgile, En. VI. 756-854),' Orpheus voce (1980) 11-22.

85. William Fitzgerald, 'Aeneas, Daedalus and the Labryinth,' Arethusa 17 (1984) 51-65.

86. Marc A. Lepain, 'Orpheus and Musaeus in Aeneid 6: Reflections on Vergil's Art of Writing,' Class. Assoc. of New England Bulletin 78 (1983) 25-6.

87. Marilyn B. Skinner, 'The Last Encounter of Dido and Aeneas: Aen. 6.450-76,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 12-18.

88. Stella Petecel, 'Eneide, VII, 8-36. Osservazioni sul carattere "polifonico" della tecnica poetica virgiliana,' Studii clasice 22 (1984) 45-9.

89. Ian Worthington, 'Aeneid 8, 728: did Augustus bridge the Araxes?,' LCM 9 (1984) 48.

90. Erich Burck, '"Optima cum pulchris animis Romana iuventus" (Verg. Aen. 10.362-79) (Liv. 22, 50, 4-12),' Von Menschenbild in der römischen Literatur II, Eckard Lefevre, ed. (Heidelberg 1981) II, 335-48.

91. G. B. Conte, 'Fra ripetizione e imitazione: Virgilio, Eneide 10.24,' RF 111 (1983) 150-7.

92. Kristina P. Nielson, 'The Tropaion in the Aeneid,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 27-33.

93. Rory B. Egan, 'Arms and Etymology in Aeneid 11,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 19-26.

Crookes is concerned with associations of anti-pietas, avarice, adultery, and deceit when gold is accented in Aeneid 1. Greek duplicity and meanness and Oriental excess are impressive counterweights in the usual links that gold has with heroism, wealth, light and life. Losada treats the monstrum infelix (Aeneid 2.245) and argues that the several components of the wooden horse endow the horse-ship with irony and ambiguity; the horse as instrument of destruction yields to the ships as vehicles of salvation. Schwarz's study of fire imagery in Aeneid 2 embroiders Knox's earlier pilot study. Schiebe explores inconsistencies between Aeneid 2 and 3 in the depiction of Aeneas. Haury offers a valuable discussion of fatum, fata, and fides in his study of Dido's culpa. Kinsey explicates the troublesome syntax (and logic) of Aeneid 4.435-6 with the suggestion that Aeneas' venia may be said to be repaid with interest if Aeneas should receive (in a sense) the rest of Dido's life in return for a modest amount of his time. Cretia detects a common technique in the Palinurus episode (5.835-6) and Aeneid 7.406-76; the schemata of both scenes are virtually identical. She argues that both episodes reflect an older, traditional pattern where Temptation and Complicity are involved. Pearce's 'Tomb by the Sea' examines Vergil's use of the motif in connection with Misenus and Palinurus, and explores the associations of the image which is shared by Horace (Odes 1.28). Cambronne discovers that Vergil marshalled two scenes of seven figures around Augustus in the heroic parade in Hades. The figures are designed to play an exemplary function for Augustus whose person they embrace. The Altar of Augustan Peace offers a relevant parallel. Fitzgerald analyses the temple gates at Cumae and discusses the figure of the labyrinth in Aeneid 6 and elsewhere in the epic. Skinner reverts to the physical and moral 'blurred clarities' (cf. W. R. Johnson) of the final meeting between Dido and Aeneas. Her assessment is compelling: 'the capacity for injury to self, or another, is inherent in the kinds of choices a human being must make; the ultimate tragedy may consist in being forced to choose.' Accusations of villainy are extraneous to the entire Carthaginian episode. Petecel interprets Aeneid 7.8-36 in the light of musical technique. The article is an outgrowth of her earlier Recherches sur la Composition rythmique de l'Enéide (Lille 1974). Worthington discovers parallels between Augustus and Alexander on the shield; the bridging of the Araxes is introduced to enable Octavian to surpass Alexander's achievements (cf. Aen. 6.794-800). Burck's article finds a convincing Ennian original for Vergil's high-lighting of Pallas and for Livy's remarks on P. Sempronius Tuditanus. The article appears for the first time in the collected works of Erich Burck. Nielson studies appearances of the trophy in Aeneid 10 and 11 with attention to both religious and military associations. Egan's exploration of Camilla's origins and the implications of her name has important bearing on the poetic function of the warrior maid. Casmilla, in Egan's view, means something like 'arms' or 'armour'; Camilla, her daughter, should mean the same and her career is conditioned by it. Nomen est omen.

AENEID: CHARACTERS

94. G. Arrigoni. Camilla Amazzone e Sacerdotessa di Diana (Milano 1982); rev. N. Horsfall CR 34 (1984) 61-2.

95. Elizabeth Belfiore, 'Ter Frustra Comprensa: Embraces in the Aeneid,' Phoenix 38 (1984) 19-30.

96. Francesco Della Corte, 'Giunone, come personaggio e come dea, in Virgilio,' Atene e Roma 38 (1983) 21-30.

97. Andrew R. Dyck, 'Sychaeus,' Phoenix 37 (1983) 239-44.

98. D. C. Feeney, 'The Reconciliations of Juno,' CQ 34 (1984) 179-84.

99. Donald Charles Huber, Jr., Turnus: A Study in Vergilian Source, Symbol and Style. Diss., Vanderbilt, 1982. DA 44 (1983) 160-A.

100. J. L. Moles, 'Aristotle and Dido's Harmartia,' G&R 31 (1984) 48-54.

101. Frances Muecke, 'Foreshadowing and Dramatic Irony in the Story of Dido,' AJPb 104 (1983) 134-55.

102. Bela Németh, 'Ariadne-Dido-Ariadne. Interpretationsgedanken über ein dramatisches Triptychon,' ACD 17-18 (1981-82) 149-59.

103. Grace Starry West, 'Andromache and Dido,' AJPb 104 (1983) 257-67.

104. R. E. Woodrow. Virgil's Aeneid XI: A Commentary on the Camilla Episode. (Diss., Oxford, 1978. unpublished).

Arrigoni's study offers a rich and tidy array of literary and archaeological evidence regarding Camilla. Religion (the Diana Cult at Aricia) and poetry are richly intermingled in a stimulating study of the Amazon and Priestess nature of the Volscian commander. Arrigoni's volume is required reading. Belfiore studies seven occasions when Aeneas embraces, or longs to embrace, members of his family. A comparison of the passages reveals one way in which Vergil portrays emotional change in Aeneas. Della Corte and Feeney are both concerned with Juno, as personality and divine agent, and with her antipathy to Aeneas and the Roman cause, and not only in Vergil. Feeney argues that Juno's unmanageable and disquieting nature resists governance; the forces represented by the goddess are still in tension at the close of the epic: the good and evil principles that hold the universe in shifting balance find their embodiment in Juno's power. Moles uses Aristotle's definition of hamartia as a blueprint for gauging Dido's moral responsibility for her downfall. Aeneid 4.165-72 signals the culpa (or hamartia) which finally destroys the Carthaginian Queen. Her sexual misdemeanour, her submission to Aeneas out of wedlock, was determining. Aeneid 4.169-72 and 393 are, in Moles's view, moral signposts. Muecke defines Vergilian irony and by using Aristotle's analysis of the elements of tragic plot, shows that this dramatic irony is basic to the structure of Vergil's 'tragedy.' Foreshadowing, in Aeneid 1, creates the sense of dramatic irony which infuses the tragic story. Németh takes a synoptic view of Catullus' Ariadne, Vergil's Dido, and Ovid's Ariadne. West argues that Dido's one-time faithful love turned to guilty forgetfulness of Sychaeus is heightened by parallels and contrast with Andromache's fidelity to the dead Hector. Dido's infirmity is also the infirmity of Carthage. Dyck's treatment of Sychaeus explores the manifold uses Vergil finds for the deceased husband: to rouse Dido to leave Carthage without taint of treason; to provide a hindrance to an involvement with Aeneas; to facilitate Dido's transition from life to death; and to enhance, in death, her heroic stature.

AENEID: THE LEGENDS

105. Pierre Grimal, 'Le retour des Dardanides; Une légitimité pour Rome,' Journal des Savants (1982) 267-82.

106. M. Ogawa, 'Virgile et les origines de Rome' (A propos de l'Enéide

VII-XII [Japanese, with résumé in French], Mediterraneus 4 (1981) 31-52.

107. Peter Toohey, 'Politics, Prejudice, and Trojan Genealogies: Varro, Hyginus, and Horace,' Arethusa 17 (1984) 5-28.

Grimal's article, which recalls J. Heurgon, 'Les Dardaniens en Afrique,' REL 47 (1969) 284-94, examines the implications of the Return of the Dardanids in the legitimization of Rome's beginnings. Perret argues, inter alia, that the Italia/ Terra Mater frieze of the Ara Pacis Augustae was probably inspired by Georgics 2.195-202, and that the scene of Aeneas Sacrificing is a reflection of the Dardanids' return. Toohey's study of Trojan genealogies intersects with Vergil's contemporary reflections of the political implications of epic descendants.

AENEID: GEOGRAPHY & ARCHAEOLOGY

108. F. Castagnoli, 'Commento topografico a Virgilio, Eneide, VIII, 720-22,' Atti Accademia Naz. dei Lincei, Rendiconti, Classe di Scienze morali, storiche e filologiche 37, 1982 (1983).

109. G. Dury-Moyaers. Enée et Lavinium: à propos des découvertes archéologiques récentes [Collection Latomus 174] (Brussels 1981); rev. N. Horsfall JRS 73 (1983) 204-5.

110. Nicholas Horsfall & Ferdinando Castagnoli, 'Mémorial of Bertha Tilly,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 52-3.

111. D. Musti, 'Una città simile a Troia: Città troiane da Siri a Lavinio,' Archeologia Classica 33 (1981) 1-26.

112. Erminio Paoletta, Virgilio e la Daunia; la matrice dauna della stirpe latina, le isole Diomedee (Napoli 1982); rev. Innocentius Parisella, Latinitas 30 (1982) 305-6.

113. Erminio Paoletta, La Via Dauno-Irpina di Enea (Napoli 1983); rev. Innocentius Parisella, Latinitas 31 (1983) 317-8.

114. E. T. Salmon, 'New Light on Early Rome,' Classicum 9 (1983) 3-6.

115. M. Scognamiglio, 'Virgilio a Ercolano,' L'Esopo 3.12 (1981) 9-16.

116. Richard F. Thomas. Lands and Peoples in Roman Poetry (Cambridge 1982); rev. N. Horsfall, CR 34 (1984) 133-4.

117. John W. Zarker, 'Augustan Art and Architecture in Vergil's Aeneid,' Classical Assoc. of New England Bulletin 78 (1983) 23-4.

Castagnoli's magisterial note treats the final scene depicted on the shield, the reception of foreign delegations at the Temple of Apollo. Horsfall's review of Dury-Moyaers account of recent archaeological finds in the territory of Lavinium perceives the inestimable service rendered by the compilation and assessment, and offers additional information and a reliable critique of scholars' uses of the historical and topographical implications of the excavations. The obituary notice records the instructive and directional topographical studies of the late Bertha Tilly. Domenico Musti's account of Trojan landfalls from Siris to Lavinium provides welcome directions for travellers and armchair devotees of Magna Graecia, Campania and Latium. Paoletta's Daunian fancies leave the reader breathless with their suggestions of Daunian implications throughout the last six books of the epic. Lavinium – *Davinium – Daunium will not appeal to most linguistic experts, even to amateurs. Sublimations of Daunian and Apulian territory traversed in common by Horace and Vergil in 37 B.C. (Horace, Serm. 1.5.87) seem unduly frequent in Paoletta's reading of the last books of the Aeneid. Salmon's account of recent finds that have inspired fresh awareness of Rome's earliest history is concise and critical and has implications for the assessment of Aeneid 8 and elsewhere. Scognamilio identifies the Pseudo-Seneca portrait with Vergil.

RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY

118. W. W. Fortenbaugh (ed.), On Stoic and Peripatetic Ethics: The Work of Arius Didymus (New Brunswick 1983) 3-13 (C. H. Kahn) and 41-65 (A. A. Long).

119. Alberto Grilli, 'Adesione o cultura? (aspetti della filosofia delle "Bucoliche")', Maia 35 (1983) 23-7.

120. Pierre Grimal, 'Quelques aspects épicuriens des Géorgiques', Journal des Savants (1980) 51-66.

121. Kristina P. Nielson, 'Aeneas and the Demands of the Dead,' CJ 79 (1983-84) 200-6.

122. A. Novara, 'La physica philosophia et le bonheur d'après Virgile, Géorg. II, v. 490-492,' REL 60 (1982) 234-47.

123. N. C. Webb, 'Direct Contact between the Hero and the Supernatural in the Aeneid,' PVS 17 (1978-80) 39-49.

Fortenbaugh's compilation of chapters on Arius Didymus, Augustus' court philosopher (30 B.C. — 9 B.C.), offers useful insights into Vergil's philosophical inclinations and tenets. Epicureanism is the hallmark of both the Bucolics and the Georgics for both Grilli and Grimal. Nielson argues that Aeneas must, according to religious convention, keep his obligations to the dead. In the case of Mago and Turnus, where the claims of the living are involved, Aeneas' pietas has to override sympathy. Novara argues that there is a Socratic tradition implicit in the expression — felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas (Georgics 2.490) implying a doctrine of happiness based on the knowledge of causes. Webb detects a consistent scheme in the recurrence of direct contacts involving the hero and divinities during the epic. There is an evolving process of response on the hero's part and a system underlies the supernatural interventions which is almost programmatic in character.

ROME AND AUGUSTUS

124. L. Havas, 'Le Virgile de l'Enéide et le régime d'Auguste,' Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 13-8.

125. Douglas Little, 'Politics in Augustan Poetry,' ANRW II. 30. 1 (Berlin 1982) 254-370.

Little provides a useful, judicious survey of the problem, replete with quotations and some astute remarks. But scholars may balk at his verdicts on the 'representative' political poets: Vergil is regarded as an Augustan sympathizer with a dark side (300); Horace is conceived as shallower, a mealy-mouthed ex-Republican.

VERGIL AND OTHER AUGUSTAN POETS

126. G. D'Anna, 'Gli inizi della fortuna di Virgilio,' Sileno 5-6 (1978-80) 373-85.

127. Janet Fairweather, 'The Gallus Papyrus: a new interpretation,' CQ 34 (1984) 167-74.
 128. Jean Gagé, 'Auguste écrivain,' ANRW II.30.1 (Berlin 1982) 611-23.
 129. D. Gagliardi, 'La campagna in Virgilio e Orazio,' C&S 20 (1981) 68-73.
 130. Alex. Hardie, 'Horace, Odes 3.30; The Poet as Triumphator,' Studii clasice 21 (1983) 49-57.
 131. Johannes Hermes, C. Cornelius Gallus und Vergil. Das Problem der Umarbeitung des vierten Georgica-Buches (Diss. Münster, 1977) [1980]; rev. Lidia Winniczuk, Gnomon 55 (1983) 746-7.
 132. S. J. Heyworth, 'A note on the Gallus fragment,' LCM 9 (1984) 63-4.
 133. Eleanor Huzar, 'The literary efforts of Mark Antony,' ANRW II.30.1 (Berlin 1982) 639-57.
 134. C. R. Philipps, 'Rethinking Augustan Poetry,' Latomus 42 (1983) 780-817.
 135. A. Primmer, 'Datierungs- und Entwicklungsfragen bei Vergil und Ovid,' WSt 16 (1982) 245-59.
 136. Kenneth Quinn, 'The poet and his audience in the Augustan Age,' ANRW II.31.1 (Berlin 1982) 75-180.
 137. G. Radke, 'Presenza di Virgilio nella poesia di Orazio,' Orazio di Venosa. Periegesi di studio (7-10 Ottobre, 1982) [Venosa 1983] 81-95.
- D'Anna studies early responses to Vergil's output and argues that neither Horace nor Propertius was a fervent admirer of the early Vergil. Fairweather regards the Qasr Ibrim papyrus, evidently reflecting Gallan verse, as a fragment of an amoebian song-contest. Signs separating the quatrains indicated where the text of the contest-poem called for a change of singer. The precedent for elegiacs in a singing match exists in (Theocr.) Idyll 8.33-60. Gagé examines the literary taste and writing of Augustus; the article offers a mine of useful references. Hardie stresses Horace's indebtedness to Vergil, Georg. 3.10ff. in the celebrated Odes, 3.30; Horace's linking of poet as triumphator with an architectural metaphor, his hope for public recognition, the references to Greek models, to his home town and native river, and the new imperial vision are common factors. Heyworth suggests that the Gallus fragment does not derive from a continuous poem. The first verse belongs properly to another work; both are components of an anthology of verse, maybe not exclusively Gallan. Huzar's survey of Antony's stabs at literature contains a rich collection of references and sheds interesting side-lights on Vergil's poetry. Philipps' rethinking of Augustan poetry, content, design, and propaganda, deserves wide reading and continuing reflection by Vergilian scholars. Quinn's reminder that publication for the Augustans was more recitatio and acroasis than written texts is useful. His treatment of art and society (166-7), the collegium poetarum, and other matters is interesting and enlightening and the article is a useful companion to his Martin Classical Lecture (1975), and to his Texts and Contexts: The Roman Writers and their Audience (Toronto 1979).

STYLE, LANGUAGE, METRE

138. J. N. Adams, 'Anatomical terminology in Latin epic,' BICS 27 (1980)

50-62.

139. Barbara Weiden Boyd, 'Cydonea mala: Vergilian word-play and allusion,' HSCP 87 (1983) 169-74.

140. J. Duhigg, 'Notes on the language of Vergil,' Classicum 9 (1983) 6-9.

141. N. A. Greenberg, 'Vocalic initials in Aeneid 12,' Hexameter Studies, R. Grotjahn, ed. [= Quantitative Linguistics 11] (Bochum 1981) 151-67.

142. Herbert H. Huxley, 'The unique rhythm of Aeneid 4.372,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 50.

143. R. Lesueur, 'Iter et ire dans l'Enéide: Quelques réflexions sur la représentation du mouvement,' Pallas 28 (1981) 15-29.

144. Walter Moskalew. Formular Language and Poetic Design in the Aeneid (Leiden 1982); rev. N. Horsfall, CR 33 (1983) 320.

145. Betty Rose Nagle, 'Open-ended closure in Aeneid 2,' CW 76 (1983) 287-8.

146. Wilhelm Ott. Metrischen Analysen zu Vergil, Aeneis Buch II [Materialen zu Metrik und Stilistik, 14] (Tübingen 1983).

147. Wilhelm Ott. Metrischen Analysen zu Vergil, Aeneis Buch III [Materialen zu Metrik und Stilistik, 15] (Tübingen 1983).

148. S. Rocca. Etologia virgiliana [Pubbl. dell'Ist. di Filol. Class. e Med. Univ. di Genova, 80] (Genova 1983).

149. Richard F. Thomas, 'Virgil's Ecphrastic Centerpieces,' HSCP 87 (1983) 175-84.

150. Robert M. Wilhelm, 'The Chariot/Ship: Vehicle of Augustan Ideology,' The Augustan Age 3 (1983-84) 73-94.

Adams detects that Vergil avoids using unpoetic words for body parts and sidesteps mentioning undignified parts and organs. Unlike Homer, Vergil seldom describes wounds, specific organs, or facial features. Boyd treats Eclogue 2.51, Corydon's gift to Alexis of 'sparrow-quinces,' and explores the ramifications of Cydon and Cydonius in connection with the fruit and passim. There are amusing associations of love-tokens and arrows that resonate in the usages. Huxley notes that the adjective Saturnius is made emphatic by its unusual position, before the second-foot diaeresis at Aeneid 4.372. Lesueur's treatment of the noun and verb for motion is instructive. Thomas' study of expositions of art works deals with Eclogue 3.36-48 (cups), and Aeneid 8.675-77 (Aeneas' shield). The centrepiece of the shield (8.675-7) is also central to the description. Usually, in fact, Vergil's poem reflects the art work described (cf. Geo. 3.16 in medio Caesar, and the murals in Juno's Temple at Carthage, (Aeneid 1.466-93). Thomas provides incentive for further study of the ekphrasis along just such lines, in terms of the linguistic and dictional tradition. Wilhelm studies the image of the chariot and its mastery as an epitome of the qualities and skills associated with leadership. For Vergil the chariot involves both personal and political control, the latter associated not only with the Roman imperium but also with Augustus himself.

INTERPRETATION AND TEXT CRITICISM

151. Robert Parker, 'A note on Aeneid 7, 649-653,' LCM 8 (1983) 160.

Parker studies the lines applied to Lausus, an instance of sorrowful epanaphora (cf. Misenu, Aen. 6.162-5); he repunctuates with a comma at the end of 7.650, and inserts a strong point at the close of 651.

VERGIL AND EARLIER WRITERS

152. Luigi Alfonsi, 'Virgilio e Calvo, il neōteros romano,' PP 203 (1982) 108-13.

153. Luigi Alfonsi, 'Nota sull'Oedipus di Cesare,' Aevum 57(1983) 70-71.

154. Stephen Bertram, 'The keeper of the winds,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 48-50.

155. David M. Halperin. Before Pastoral: Theocritus and the Ancient Tradition of Bucolic Poetry (New Haven and London 1983); rev. John E. Rexine, Vergilius 29 (1983) 83-4.

156. David M. Halperin, 'The Forebears of Daphnis,' TAPA 113 (1983) 183-200.

157. Emmanuele Narducci, 'Due note ciceroniane. 1. Una reminiscenza enniana in Cicero e in Virgilio?,' Maia 35 (1983) 19-21.

158. L. De Neubourg, 'Virgile et Aratos: increpuit densis alis dans les Georgiques, I, 382,' RhM 126 (1983) 308-20.

159. Otto Skutsch, 'Wilamowitz an Norden über dessen "Ennius und Vergilius,"' Antike und Abendland 29 (1983) 90-94.

160. Michael von Albrecht, 'Vergil und Homer,' Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 7-12.

Alfonsi discovers likely instances of Vergilian borrowings from Calvus and some exceptional uses. Caesar's youthful work, Oedipus, may provide some sidelights on Vergil's 'tragic' repertoire. Bertram distinguishes Homer's wind-keeper, Aeolus (Odyssey 10.1ff.), from Vergil's version (Aeneid 1.52ff.). Vergil makes radical departures in his depiction of the character whose attitudes and needs frequently prefigure those of Aeneas. Halperin's book and article provide useful background for a reading of Vergil's Eclogues. The article on Daphnis's forebears aligns Idyll 1 with ancient Near Eastern literature and religious contexts. The 'religious aura' clinging to Daphnis enhanced his role as presiding genius of the Sicilian landscape. Narducci associates Cicero, Rep. 6.10, and De Senectute 46 with Vergil, Aeneid 1.748; 6.160, and 8.309. Neubourg regards increpuit densis alis (Georgics 1.382) as a faithful translation of Aratus' original thereby indicating that Vergil's forecasting device was not original but owed its inspiration to the Greek model. The correspondence with Norden is yet another tribute to Wilamowitz's integrity and insight as scholar. Von Albrecht compares the prooemia of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey with that of Vergil's epic.

ANCIENT AUTHORS AFTER VERGIL

161. Paolo Cugisi, 'Carmina Latina Epigraphica e tradizione letteraria,' Epigraphica 44 (1982) 65-107 (Virgilio 80-89), [Indices 104-5].

162. Salvatore Ferraro, La presenza di Virgilio nei graffiti pompeiani (Napoli 1982); rev. Susan Martin, Vergilius 29 (1983) 81-2.

163. M. Gigante, 'Virgilio fra Ercolano e Pompei,' Atene e Roma 38 (1983) 31-50.

164. M. Gigante. Civiltà delle forme letterarie nell'antica Pompei (Roma 1979).

165. Robert A. Kaster, 'The Echo of a Chaste Obscenity: Verg. E. VI. 26 and Symm. EP. VI. 22. 1,' AJPh 104 (1983) 395-7.
166. C. A. Ripasarda, 'Virgilio in Censorino,' Sileno 5/6 (1979-80) 387-91.
167. G. Salanitro, 'Virgilio e Osidio Geta,' Sileno 5/6 (1979-80) 393-400.
168. H. Savon, 'Béatitudes virgiliennes et pensée apocalyptique à la fin du quatrième siècle,' Latomus 42 (1983) 850-62.
169. R. P. M. Testard, 'Virgile, Saint Ambroise et l'Exsultet: Autour d'un problème de critique verbale,' REL 60 (1982) 283-97.
170. Lynette Thompson, 'A Lucanian contradiction of Vergilian Pietas: Pompey's Amor,' CJ 79 (1983-84) 207-15.

Cugisi's compilation lists the Vergilian instances and supplies a Table and Indices with bibliographic notices. Ferraro and Gigante comment on the Vergilian graffiti in the Campanian centres. Gigante's book deals with reflections of Vergil in Pompeian art (pp. 163ff.). Actually, the instances are few in number and often contested; the Eclogues and Georgics are ignored; of the Aeneid (pp. 178ff.), although Gigante offers an 'optimistic' catalogue (with bibliography), there is only one unquestioned representation, The Wounding of Aeneas (Casa di Sirico, Reg. VII, 1, 25). Brendel discarded the long-phallused apes as a parody of the Trojan refugee family thirty years ago (RM 60-61 [1953-54] 153ff.). Savon's article on the Vergilian beatitudes: felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas (Geo. 2.490) and fortunatus et ille deos qui novit agrestis (Geo. 2.493) traces their recurrence and application in patristic writers.

MANUSCRIPTS

171. Paul C. Burns, 'Beneventan Interest in Vergil,' Studies in Medieval and Renaissance History, J. A. S. Evans & R. W. Unger, edd. 5 (1982) 175-278.
172. Andrea Dessì Fulgheri, 'Il Moretum pseudovirgiliano,' Sandalion 5 (1982) 175-89.
173. Marcello Gigante, 'Napoletano Latino 6, Biblioteca Nazionale di Napoli (Vindobonense Latin. 58),' Accademie e Biblioteche d'Italia 49 (1981) 239-65.
174. R. W. Williams, T. S. Pattie, Virgil: his Poetry through the Ages (London 1982); rev. B. C. Barker-Benfield, CR 33 (1983) 321.

Burns identifies distinctive elements in three Beneventan manuscripts containing Servius' commentary from the 8th, 10th, and late 10th or early 11th century and provides a clear, accurate edition. There are extant eleven manuscripts in Beneventan script containing either the text of Vergil or the Commentary of Servius. Fulgheri treats the Moretum text in Codex Cotton Titus XX and so expands on M. D. Reeve, 'The Textual Tradition of the Appendix Vergiliana, II,' Maia 28 (1976) 233-54, and A. Rigg, 'Medieval Latin Poetic Anthologies I,' Mediaeval Studies 39 (1977) 281-330. Gigante examines an 8th century manuscript of Vergil.

VERGIL AND LATER AGES

175. Z. Philip Ambrose, 'The Reconciliation of Julian and Junian in Vergil's Aeneid,' Classical Assoc. of New England Bulletin 78 (1983) 21-2.

176. Christopher Charles Baswell, "Figures of Olde Werke": Visions of Virgil in Later Medieval England. Diss., Yale University, 1983. DA 44 (1984) 2761-A.
177. H. Berthold, "'Elegantissimus poeta': Vergil und das römische Literaturpublikum der Spätantike," Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 37-42.
178. Frank Cottrill, 'Virgil in England,' The Augustan Age 3 (1983-4), preface.
179. Joseph A. Dane, 'Chaucer's House of Fame and the Rota Virgili,' Classical and Modern Literature 1 (1980) 57-75.
180. Sue Warrick Doederlein, 'Ut Pictura Poesis: Dryden's Aeneis and Palamon and Arcite,' Comparative Literature 33 (1981) 156-66.
181. Robert J. Edgeworth, 'Milton's "Darkness Visible" and Aeneid 7,' CJ 79 (1983-84) 97-99.
182. Charles Fantazzi, 'Homage to Virgil,' Vergilius 29 (1983) 1-11.
183. Thomas J. Fujimura, 'Dryden's Virgil: Translation as Autobiography,' Studies in Philology 80 (1983) 67-83.
184. W. Gager, Oedipus (acted 1577-92); Dido (acted 1583), J. W. Binns, ed. [Renaissance Latin Drama in England, First Series, I] (Hildesheim & New York 1981).
185. Bruce Edward Graver, Wordsworth's Translations from Latin Poetry (Virgil, Georgics, Aeneid). Diss., The University of North Carolina, 1983. DA 44 (1984) 3694-A.
186. Sandra Hindman, ed., The Early Illustrated Book: Essays in Honor of Lessing J. Rosenwald (Washington 1982); rev. Herbert W. Benario, Vergilius 29 (1983) 80-81.
187. Lee M. Johnson, 'Virgil, Wordsworth, and the Power of Sound,' Mosaic 13 (1979) 93-109.
188. Ain Kaalep, 'Vergil in Estland,' Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 43-7.
189. F. Kemp, 'Vergil in Deutschland,' Imprimatur 10 (1982) 42-55.
190. Carol Freed Levine, 'All for Love and Book IV of the Aeneid: The Moral Predicament,' Comparative Literature 33 (1981) 239-57.
191. L. R. Lind, 'Robert Frost, Classicist,' Classical and Modern Literature 1 (1980) 7-23.
192. Ronald Russel MacDonald, The Burial Places of Memory: Epic Underworlds in Virgil, Dante, and Milton. Diss., Yale University, 1983. DA 44 (1984) 2755-A.
193. Anthony Manousis, "'Falling Asleep over the Aeneid:" Lowell, Freud, and the Classics,' Comparative Literature Studies 21 (1984) 16-29.
194. Oswyn Murray, 'The Death of Virgil,' Hesperiam 3 (1980) 7-18.
195. A. Parente, 'Ancora di Croce e dell'Enea virgiliano,' RStud Croc 16 (1979) 372-82.
196. G. Puccioni, 'Croce e l'Enea virgiliano,' RStud Croc 17 (1981) 67-74.
197. Wolfgang E. H. Rudat, 'Milton's Satan and Virgil's Juno: The Perverseness of Disobedience in Paradise Lost,' Renaissance and Reformation 3 (1979) 77-92.
198. Wolfgang E. H. Rudat, 'Fierce Maid: Pope's "Rape of the Lock" and Virgil's Camilla,' American Notes and Queries 20 (1982) 135-7.
199. Wolfgang E. H. Rudat, 'Pope's Coquettes and the Game of Ombre:

The Rape of the Lock and Vergilian Exegesis,' Essays in Literature 9 (1982) 251-60.

200. Eva Stehlikova, 'A recent message of Vergil to our times: Hermann Broch: The Death of Vergil,' Concilium Eirene 16 (1983) 48-54.

201. Werner Suerbaum, Vergil's Aeneis. Beiträge zu ihrer Rezeption in Gegenwart und Geschichte (Bamberg 1981); rev. Bernhard Kytzler, Gnomon 55 (1983) 164-6.

202. W. Craig Turner, 'Love and the Queen of Carthage: A Look at Marlowe's Dido,' Essays in Literature 11 (1984) 3-9.

203. Jürgen von Stackelberg, 'Vergil, Lalli, Scarron. Ein Ausschnitt aus der Geschichte der Parodie,' Arcadia 17 (1982) 225-44.

Cottrill's list of art works and monuments in southern England which were inspired by Vergil's Aeneid is a vade mecum for travellers. Dane finds formal and thematic order in Chaucer's House of Fame by seeing the tripartite poem in terms of the medieval rhetorical concept of the rota Virgili by which, as Geoffrey of Vinsauf remarked, there are found three styles exemplified in Vergil's major works: 'in Bucolicis humili, in Georgicis mediocri, in Eneyde grandiloqui.' The House of Fame Part I, has an epic subject and aspirations; II is in the middle or didactic range; and III resembles the lyric pastoral entertainments of the Eclogues. Doederlein argues that Dryden's interest in literary pictorialism governed changes to the original in his translation of the Aeneid; he praised the painterly aspect of Vergil's poetry in a preface. Edgeworth adduces Aen. 7.456f. (atro lumine), and the Zohar as inspiration for Milton's 'darkness visible.' Fantazzi's tribute examines Broch's rhapsodic, prolix account of Vergil's final hours. Hindman's collection contains articles by Eleanor Winsor Leach on 'Illustration as Interpretation in Brant's and Dryden's Editions of Vergil' (1502, and 1697), and Ruth Mortimer's 'Vergil in the Rosenwald Collections,' a medley of texts and various illustrated editions. Johnson examines Eclogue IV and Wordsworth's 'Immortality Ode' for thematic and artistic affinities. The design, Johnson argues, is based on the geometrical ratio of the Golden Section, which controls the location of symbolic words and sounds. Return or recollection and continuity are central to the themes and designs of both poems. Kemp deals with illustrated versions of Vergil's works. Levine examines Dryden's All for Love as a reworking of the action of Aeneid 4. Dryden resolves the problem of abandonment not by Vergilian but by Senecan principles. Lind mentions Frost's special interest in Catullus, Vergil, Horace, and particularly Lucretius, and considers the relationship of North of Boston to the genre of the eclogue. Rudat argues that Milton's opening of Paradise Lost with allusions to Vergil's opening of the Aeneid suggests parallels between Satan and Juno as the evil forces of the respective epics. Milton uses the Vergilian questions of the openings as rhetorical devices that create suspense and enhance various aspects of the conflict between good and evil in both poems. Stehlikova, and Murray extol the virtues and unique qualities of Hermann Broch's Death of Virgil (1945). Von Stackelberg studies Scarron's fanciful, complex, critical parody of Vergil. His Virgile travesti abides as a paragon in the history of epic parody.

McMaster University
31 July, 1984

Alexander G. McKay