

VERGILIUS

VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY 1997-1998

Author(s): ALEXANDER G. McKAY

Source: Vergilius (1959-), 1998, Vol. 44 (1998), pp. 85-109

Published by: The Vergilian Society

Stable URL: <https://www.jstor.org/stable/41587185>

JSTOR is a not-for-profit service that helps scholars, researchers, and students discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content in a trusted digital archive. We use information technology and tools to increase productivity and facilitate new forms of scholarship. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Your use of the JSTOR archive indicates your acceptance of the Terms & Conditions of Use, available at <https://about.jstor.org/terms>

JSTOR

The Vergilian Society is collaborating with JSTOR to digitize, preserve and extend access to Vergilius (1959-)

VERGILIAN BIBLIOGRAPHY 1997-1998

BY

ALEXANDER G. MCKAY

THE PRESENT SURVEY OF VERGILIAN SCHOLARSHIP is the thirty-sixth in the VERGILIUS series. Classical World 68:1 (1974), published in association with The Vergilian Society, Inc., contains my "Recent Work on Vergil: A Bibliographic Survey, 1964-1973." The survey was reprinted in The Classical World Bibliography of Vergil, Walter Donlan, ed., New York & London: Garland 1978. Subsequent reviews have appeared in Vergilius 19 (1973) to 43 (1997). N.B. Joseph Farrell at the University of Pennsylvania continues to expand his important Vergil Home Page and its pedagogical applications. Refer to: ccat.sas.upenn.edu/~joef/vergil/home.html.

This 1997-1998 compilation is greatly indebted to the assistance and cooperation of two libraries: Mills Memorial Library, McMaster University, and The Robarts Library of the University of Toronto. Notices, offprints, and facsimiles of articles, chapters, and titles have been generously provided by authors and readers. Scholars, authors, editors, and publishers are cordially invited to send material and advice to the editor, Alexander G. McKay, Department of Classics, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario L8S 4M2 Canada. FAX: 905 526 9245.

N.B. "AA.VV." = auctores varii.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

1. L'Année Philologique, Bibliothèque critique et analytique de l'antiquité gréco-latine, 65 [1994] Paris 1996.

2. The Cambridge Companion to Vergil (CCV), List of works cited, 340-358.

3. Philip Hardie. Virgil (Greece & Rome New Survey, 28). G&R 45 (1998) 117-122.

4. Fred W. Jenkins, Classical Studies: A Guide to the Reference Literature. Englewood, CO. 1996. Rev: Naiditch, CB 73 (1997) 57-61.

5. Alexander P. MacGregor Jr., Ten Years of Classicists: Dissertations and Outcomes. 1988-1997. Wauconda, IL. 1998.

6. Alexander G. McKay, "Vergilian Bibliography 1996-1997," Vergilius 43 (1997) 101-121.

Vergilius 44 (1998) 85-109

7. Alexander G. McKay, "A Selective Bibliography for the Study of Vergil's Aeneid incorporating Advanced Placement Prescriptions for Students, High School Teachers, College and University Instructors 1997," in Clyde Pharr, Vergil's Aeneid I-VI, reprint. Wauconda, IL 1998. 115-150.

MacGregor's list of dissertations is culled and sorted from the Newsletter of the APA.

LEXICA AND COLLECTIONS

8. Simon Hornblower and Antony Spawforth, eds. The Oxford Classical Dictionary. 3rd edition. Oxford 1996. Rev: Kitchell, CO 75 (1997) 38-39; Suits, NECJ 25 (1998) 93-95.

9. Nicholas Horsfall, ed. A Companion to the Study of Virgil. New York, Cologne, 1995. Rev: Boyd, Vergilius 43 (1997) 131-144.

10. Gigliola Maggiori, Incipient silvae cum primum surgere. Mondo vegetale e nomenclatura della flora di Virgilio. Roma 1995. Rev: Capponi, Latomus 56 (1997) 678-680.

11. Charles Martindale, ed. The Cambridge Companion to Virgil. Cambridge 1997 [CCV]. Rev: Wright, JACTRev 23 (1998) 25.

12. Hans-Peter Stahl, ed. Vergil's Aeneid: Augustan Epic and Political Context. London 1998 [AEPC].

13. Robert M. Wilhelm, Howard Jones, eds. The Two Worlds of the Poet: New Perspectives on Vergil. Detroit 1992. Rev: Perkell, Vergilius 43 (1997) 144-155.

TRANSLATIONS

14. Iñigo Ruiz Arzalluz, Publio Virgilio Maron: Bukolikak eta Georgikak. Introduction, Basque translation, notes. [Bibliotheca scriptorum classicorum Vasconica] Vittoria-Gasteiz 1997.

15. Iñigo Ruiz Arzalluz, "Virgilio Txerribuztangoerrekan (I. Bukoliken eta Georgiken euskal itzupenak)," ASJU 29 (1995) 662-94.

16. Colin Burrow, "Virgil in English translation," CCV 21-37.

17. B. Hughes Fowler, Vergil: Eclogues. Chapel Hill 1997.

18. Ian Ganassi, (tr.), "Virgil's Aeneid, Book XI, lines 532-596," New England Review 18 (1997) 141-145.

19. K. W. Gransden, ed., Virgil in English. Harmondsworth 1996. Rev: Putnam, NECJ 25 (1998) 103-104.

20. John Herington, "Virgil in English: Losing Virgil," The New Criterion 15 (1996) 58-62.

21. Edward McCrorie, tr., V.J. Cleary (foreword), Virgil: The Aeneid. Ann Arbor 1995. Rev: Hardie, CR 48 (1998) 193-194.

22. Alain Michel, ed. Virgile: Géorgiques. [Présentation: Alain Michel; traduction et notes, Alain Michel, Jeanne Dion, Philippe Heuzé] Paris 1997.

Arzalluz (#14) provides Basque translations of the Bucolics and Georgics. Basque translations of the classics appeared first at the beginning of the 16th century. Burrow's essay reminds readers that every translation is always an exercise in interpretation, a reading. Chaucer, Gavin Douglas, and Dryden are center-stage. Fowler's translation of the Eclogues catches the spirit of the original.

APPENDIX VERGILIANA

23. Margaret A. Brucia, "E PLURIBUS UNUM: Of Mottoes and the Moretum." CO 75 (1997) 1-3.

24. Nigel Holmes, "Ciris 506ff.," Latomus 56 (1997) 868.

25. E. Magnelli, "Imitazione di Saffo in Catalepton 12," A&R 42 (1997) 42-44.

ECLOGUES: GENERAL

26. Paul Alpers, What is Pastoral? Chicago 1996. Rev: Halporn, BMCR 9 (1998) 397.

27. R.P.H. Green, "Octavian and Vergil's Eclogues," Euphrosyne 24 (1996) 225-236.

28. Jennifer Susan MacDonald, Studies in Allusion in the 'Eclogues' of Vergil. Diss. University of Illinois. 1997.

29. Charles Martindale, "Green Politics: the Eclogues," CCV 107-124.

Alpers' fine study of pastoral includes Theocritus, Vergil and Shakespeare and stresses modern incarnations. Martindale explores the relationship between the political and the aesthetic within the Eclogues and within writing about them. He speculates at the close: "Whether the current preoccupation with the environment and the greening of politics will turn poets back to the Eclogues remains to be seen (122)."

ECLOGUES: INDIVIDUAL

30. Edwin D. Floyd, "Vergil's Eclogue 4," Explicator 56 (1997) 3-5.

31. Lorenz Rumpf, Extremus Labor: Vergils 10. Ekloge und die Poetik der Bucolica. [Hypomnemata 112] Göttingen 1996. Rev: Van Sickle, CJ 93 (1998) 212-216.

32. B. Zucchelli, "Il giuramento di Tirsi (Verg. ecl. 7, 41-43)," Paideia 50 (1995) 355-366.

GEORGICS: GENERAL

33. William Batstone, "Virgilian didaxis: value and meaning in the Georgics," CCV 125-144.

34. Alexander Dalzell, The Criticism of Didactic Poetry: Virgil, and Ovid. Toronto 1996. Rev: Tarrant, Vergilius 43 (1997) 122-127.

35. Ben James Hennelly, Translation and Implication: The Two Visions of Virgil's 'Georgics.' Diss. Brown University, 1997.

36. Stephanie Nelson, God and the Land. The Metaphysics of Farming in Hesiod and Vergil [with a translation of Hesiod's Works and Days by David Grene]. Oxford 1997.

37. L.P. Wilkinson, The Georgics of Virgil: A Critical Survey, (reprint). Foreword and Bibliography by Niall Rudd. Norman OK 1997.

38. F. David Buglianello Wondrich, On the Borders of Poetry: Genre and the European Didactic Poem from Antiquity to the Renaissance. Diss., New York University 1997.

Batstone argues that the diversity of modern interpretations of the Georgics reflects the Georgics' larger value and meaning. For Batstone, the poem is a field or a dynamic, one which "complicates our feelings and confounds our paradigms (142)."

GEORGICS: INDIVIDUAL

39. J. Arcadio Pagaza, S. Lopez Mena (eds), Publio Virgilio Marón. Géorgica primera. [Traducción literal, J.A.P. Fijación] Mexico City 1995.

40. Francesca Boldren, "Il ritorno di Orfeo (Verg. georg. 4, 509)," in Miscillo Flamina. Studi in onore di Carmelo Ripasarda. Antonella Degl'Innocenti, Gabriella Moretti, eds. Trento 1997. 83-99.

41. F. Borca, "Altae neu crede paludi. Api a paludi in Verg. georg. 4, 48f.," Sileno 21 (1995) 161-166.

42. V. Casadio, "Verg. Georg. IV 494-8," Museum Criticum 30-31[1995-96] (1997) 235-237.

43. Egil Kraggerud, "Vergil Announcing the Aeneid: On Georg. 3. 1-48," AEPC 1-20.

44. M. Owen Lee, Virgil as Orpheus: A Study of the Georgics. Albany 1996. Rev: Kilpatrick, UTQ 67 (1997-98) 168-170; Putnam, Vergilius 43 (1997) 127-131; Sharrock, G&R 44 (1997) 230-231.

45. Paul Murgatroyd, "Aristaeus and Mount Lycaeus," RhMus 140 (1997) 285-290.

Kraggerud provides a meticulous commentary on the proem to Georgics 3, 1-48 and argues that the poem honoring Caesar (Octavian) was an Aeneid closely resembling the extant epic. The proem does not support the idea that Vergil altered his design for a contemporary epic on Caesar to a mythical-historical epic on Aeneas. Murgatroyd accents parallels in Aristaeus' earlier trip to the source of the Peneus (534ff) and Orpheus' visit to Taenarum and Hades (467ff). Orpheus' rite de passage requiring bravery and devotion is more terrifying and futile.

AENEID: GENERAL

46. Accademia Nazionale Virgiliana: Atti e memorie 72 [1994] Mantova 1995. Rev: Fantazzi, Vergilius 43 (1997) 161-163.

47. Douglas Blow, "Epic Performance on Trial: Virgil's Aeneid and the power of Eros in song," Arethusa 27 (1994) 223-246.

48. A.J. Boyle, ed. Roman Epic. London 1996. Rev: Green, JACTRev (Autumn) 1997, 18; Lesueur, Latomus 56 (1997) 674.

49. Susanna M. Braund, Christopher Gill, eds. The Passions in Roman Thought and Literature. Cambridge 1997. Rev. article: Galinsky, Vergilius 43 (1997) 89-100.

50. D. Estefania, "Las naves de Eneas," Fortunatae 7 (1995) 187-201.

51. Bruce Gibson, "Aeneas' Story," Omnibus 34 (September 1997) 28-31.

52. Hans-Christian Günther, Überlegungen zur Entstehung von Vergils Aeneid. [Hypomnemata 113] Göttingen 1996. Rev: Brisson, Latomus 56 (1997) 875-877.

53. Peter N. Howard, "The Grading of the 1997 Advanced Placement Examinations on Latin: Vergil," CO 75 (1997) 5-13.

54. Duncan Kennedy, "Virgilian epic," CCV 145-154.

55. Charles Martindale, "The classic of all Europe," CCV 1-18.

56. Jean Mingay, "The Real and the Fabulous: Description in Virgil," JACTRev 23 (1998) 10-12.

57. Brooks Otis, Virgil: A Study in Civilized Poetry. Foreword, Ward W. Briggs, Jr. Norman OK 1995 [orig. publ. 1964]. Rev: Williams, CJ 92 (1996) 189.

58. Michael C. J. Putnam, Virgil's Aeneid: Interpretation and

Influence. Chapel Hill, NC 1995. Rev: Grewing, AA 50 (1997) 168-169; McKay, IJCT (Spring 1997) 518-520; Williams, CJ 92 (1996) 185-189.

59. Steven Shankman, In Search of the Classic; Reconsidering the Greco-Roman Tradition. Homer to Valéry and Beyond. University Park PA 1994. Review essay: Martindale, CLS 35 (1998) 72-80.

60. Katharine Toll, "Making Roman-ness and the Aeneid," ClAnt 16 (1997) 34-56.

61. M.R. Wright, "Ferox virtus: anger in Virgil's Aeneid," in Susanna Morton Braund, Christopher Gill, eds., The Passions in Roman Thought and Literature (Cambridge 1997) 169-184.

Kennedy addresses modern responses to Vergil which rest on appropriation, ideological assumptions, and mutable notions of historical understanding, and studies T. S. Eliot's critical essays on the epic poet. Textual interpretation adheres to two models, "romantic" and "epic." The "romantic" model "would see any interpretation of the text...as one in an endless series of readings (none of which has a more privileged status than any other per se) which make of the text a configuration or allegory of the interpreter's concerns;" the "epic" model "sees previous readings as allegories, but within a teleological structure that would foreground the present interpretation as the truth (153)." Martindale reminds readers of Vergil that "we read poetry as embodied beings, and poststructuralists have said too little about the rhythms of writing, of the danced and gestural elements in poiesis and the response of the body to sound and metre (17)." Mingay provides a summary account of Vergil's response to art works, architecture, and engineering. Toll argues for an Italian, rather than a more narrowly Roman, conception of national identity in the epic. She seeks to undermine the idea that Vergil's generation and Augustus' regime should be regarded as the "climax" or "culmination" or "fulfillment: of the historical process as the Aeneid imagines it. Vergil's audience was invited to imagine a very long-range future.

AENEID: INDIVIDUAL BOOKS

62. H. W. Stubbs, "Laocoon Again," Vergilius 43 (1997) 3-18.

63. Maurizio Bettini, "Ghosts of exile; doubles and nostalgia in Vergil's parva Troia (Aeneid 3 294ff.), ClAnt 16 (1997) 8-33.

64. P. V. Cova, Il libro III dell'Eneide. Milano 1994. Rev: O'Hara, AJP 117 (1996) 332-335; Dion, Latomus 56 (1997) 908-910.

65. Hans-Peter Stahl, "Political Stop-overs on a Mythological Travel Route: from Battling Harpies to the Battle of Actium (Aen. 3. 268-293)," AEPC 37-84.

66. Julia T. Dyson, "Birds, grandfathers, and neoteric sorcery in Aeneid 4. 254 and 7. 412," CQ 47 (1997) 314-315.
67. S. Ingallina, "Lettura del libro di Didone. Struttura di una morte annunciata," in AA.VV. Studia classica Iohanni Tarditi oblata. Milano 1996. 229-263.
68. A. Bowie, "Exuvias effigiemque: Dido, Aeneas and the body as sign," in Dominic Montserrat, ed., Changing Bodies, changing meanings. Studies in the human body in antiquity. London/New York 1998. 57-79.
69. David Sansone, "Virgil, Aeneid 5. 835-836," CQ 46 (1996) 429-433.
70. Rainer Foss, Griechische Jenseitsvorstellungen von Homer bis Plato: mit einem Anhang über Vergil's sechstes Buch der Aeneis. Aachen 1997.
71. Reinhold F. Glei, "The Show Must Go on: the Death of Marcellus and the Future of the Augustan Principate (Aen. 6. 860-86)," AEPC 119-134.
72. J. Mambwini Kivula-Kiaku, "Poésie, prophétie et rêve dans l'Énéide VI ou la 'philosophie du destin romain' dans l'imaginaire virgilien," LEC 65 (1997) 49-64.
73. M. Owen Lee, "The Golden Bough" in The Olive-Tree Bed and Other Quests. Toronto 1997. 41-69.
74. Eckard Lefèvre, "Vergil as a Republican (Aen. 6, 815-35)," AEPC 101-118.
75. J.-Y. Maleuvre, "Porte d'ivoire et Rameau d'Or: éléments de caco-zélie dans le sixième livre de l'Énéide," REA 98 (1996) 91-107.
76. James M. Pfundtsein, "Per Astra ad Aspera: Aeneid 6. 725," Vergilius 43 (1997) 22-30.
77. Anton Powell, "The Peopling of the Underworld (Aen. 6. 608-27)," AEPC 85-100.
78. Elaine Fantham, "Allecto's First Victim: A Study of Vergil's Amata (Aen. 7. 341-405 and 12. 1-80)," AEPC 135-153.
79. Don Fowler, "Opening the Gates of War (Aen. 7. 601-40)," AEPC 155-174.
80. M. R. Gale, "The shield of Turnus (Aeneid 7. 783-92)," G&R 44 (1997) 176-196.
81. S. J. Harrison, "The Survival and Supremacy of Rome: The Unity of the Shield of Aeneas," JRS 87 (1997) 70-76.
82. Alexander G. McKay, "Non enarrabile textum? The Shield of Aeneas and the Triple Triumph in 29 B.C. (Aen. 8. 630-728)," AEPC 199-211.
83. Llewelyn Morgan, "Assimilation and Civil War: Hercules and Cacus (Aen. 8. 186-267)," AEPC 175-197.

84. Roger Rees, "Revisiting Evander at Aeneid 8. 363," CQ 46 (1996) 583-586.
85. Joachim Dingle, Kommentar zu 9. Buch der Aeneid Vergils. Heidelberg 1997.
86. Philip Hardie, Vergil, Aeneid Book IX. Cambridge 1994. Rev: Huninck, Mnem. 49 (1996) 485-489; Lesueur, Latomus 56 (1997) 670.
87. Stephen Harrison, "The Sword-Belt of Pallas: Moral Symbolism and Political Ideology (Aen. 10. 495-505)," AEPC 223-242.
88. Sabine Lucciani, "... Dulcis moriens reminiscitur Argos (Énéide, X, 782). Quelques remarques sur le vocabulaire du temps chez Virgile," BAGB 2 (1997) 117-137.
89. Andreola Rossi, "Reversal of Fortune and Change in Genre in Aeneid 10," Vergilius 43 (1997) 31-44.
90. A. Russo, "Verg. Aen. 10, 805," in Antonella Degl'Innocenti, Gabriella Moretti, eds., Miscillo flamine. Studi in onore di Carmelo Ripasarda. Trento 1997. 263-273.
91. Philip Hardie, "Fame and defamation in the Aeneid: the Council of Latins (Aen. 11. 225-467)," AEPC 243-270.
92. Netta Berlin, "War and Remembrance: Aeneid 12. 554-60 and Aeneas's Memory of Troy," AJP 119 (1998) 11-42.
93. G. Danek, "Purpur und Elfenbein (Verg. Aen. 12, 64-69 und Hom. Il. 4. 141-147)," WSt 110 (1997) 91-104.
94. V. Di Benedetto, "Pathos e ideologia nel finale dell' Eneide," RFIC 124 (1996) 149-174.
95. V. Di Benedetto, "I paragoni del cervo e del sogno nel XII dell' Eneide," RFIC 124 (1996) 290-299.
96. Joseph Christopher Hoffmann, An Examination of Vergil's use of conflict between 'furor' and 'pietas' at the end of the Aeneid. Diss. University of Oregon 1997.
97. M. Korenjak, "Pallas, Athene und der Schluss der Aeneid," Mnem. 50 (1997) 337-342.
98. Christine Perkell, "The lament of Juturna: Pathos and Interpretation in the Aeneid," TAPA 127 (1997) 257-281.
99. Elena Theodorakopoulos, "Closure: The Book of Virgil," CCV 155-165.
100. A. Traina, ed. Virgilio: L'Utopia e la storia: Il libro XII dell'Eneide e antologia delle opere. Torino 1997.
101. A. Traina, "Latino e gli dei in fuga (Verg. Aen. XII. 285s)," Eikasmos 7 (1996) 255-259.
102. David West, "The End and the Meaning (Aen. 12. 791-842)," AEPC 303-318.

Stubbs treats Laocoon as an invention of Arctinus or a predecessor, as male counterpart to Cassandra; Laocoon may have been highlighted in a separate cycle, centred on the cult of Apollo Thymbraeus. Thereafter, poets and painters contributed to his development. The horrifying human tragedy marks a stage in the consummation of history in Rome's foundation and the establishment of the Augustan Empire. Bettini's analysis of Aeneas' visit to parva Troia in Epirus is centered on the theme of "substitute" and "doubles." The Trojan exiles (Andromache and Helenus) are victims of a syndrome comparable to "nostalgia" or "an excess of identity." Aeneas cannot be imprisoned by the past; he will not rebuild Troy, his own identity is a total loss; only the Penates survive from the lost patria. Stahl's chapter attempts to fathom Vergil's personal agenda in selecting the landfalls which mark the approach to Actium and Aeneas' actions in the area. He accents the references that Aeneid 3 makes to its contemporary political environment as well as its thoroughly Augustan perspective. Dyson studies momentary ambiguities relating to birds and grandfathers, and Circaean sorcery. Gleason reasons that Vergil viewed the death of Marcellus (23 BC) as a divine "warning" to which Augustus reacted appropriately on political and personal grounds. The role of nepotes, a repeated emphasis in the epic, may point to a concrete dynastic background (the birth of Gaius Caesar in 20 BC). Father Lee's study of quests includes an insightful account of Aeneas' adventures at Cumae and the descent-ascent sequence. "What is his contribution to our definition of the quest? That the quest can be a paradigm for history. That human history can never be explained without a sympathetic understanding of the ambivalences of human nature (69)." Lefèvre analyses Aeneid 6, 815-835 and underscores Vergil's favorable presentation of early Republican heroes; his attitude to Julius Caesar, 'forerunner' of the Principate, is critical. Pfundtsein explores the meaning of Titania astra with reference to the zodiac, to scholarly responses, and to parallels (Georgics 1, 231f; Aeneid 6, 795f.). Powell studies Vergil's line-up of offenders in Tartarus and argues that Vergil uses his mythic underworld to target historical foes, opponents of Octavian's faction and of Augustan values. Powell argues that a discernible pattern of significant omissions in the sinful references served the personal interests of the Princes. Fantham argues for Amata's reasonable resistance to Latinus' divine imperative. Amata's role echoes the passion and self-destruction of Dido but it is also colored by elements of Hecuba in Iliad 22 and of Juno who challenges Jupiter's overall design. Fowler examines the opening of the Gates of War in the light of opening and closing imagery in the epic and in Roman culture. "Her action encodes an energy which is essential to the very idea of being Roman, and highlights the complexity and ambiguity at the heart of Roman cultural self-definition (vii).” Gale studies the symbolic value of Turnus’ decorative armor: the triple-crested helmet with an image of the Chimaera, and his shield, depicting the metamorphosis of Io, part of his noble ancestry. The helmet implies that he is inimical to reason, order, and the gods; the shield presents Turnus as victim, whether of the gods or his own passions. Gale associates the ambiguous symbolism of Turnus’ armor with that of Pallas’ baldric; Turnus again appears to be both criminal and victim. Harrison studies scholars’ arguments for the principle of selection in the decorated shield; he accents Actium and the triumph as the most recent and glorious examples of the shield’s thematic content. McKay sets the succession of scenes in Vulcan’s shield in the perspective of the pompa triumphalis and of monuments and landmarks along its route; the shield’s panegyric message is anchored in Rome’s present-day environment and in the context of the pax Augusta. Morgan reviews recent political interpretations of the Hercules-Cacus episode. Rees argues for reinstatement of Servius Auctus’ natural and attested identification of Evander’s regia as the Regia of the Forum Romanum, replete with regal and republican associations. Oliver Lyne’s sense of political ambiguity, of “further voices” in Vergil’s “reading” of the event, in Morgan’s view, is really effective propaganda for the Augustan regime. Harrison regards Pallas’ baldric and its iconography as significant to the moral and narrative function of the poem. Tragedy rather than criminality is the focus. He relates the Danaid episode to the sculptural program of Augustus’ Palatine Apollo temple, where emphasis rests on the triumph over Egypt and Cleopatra; Vergil counters the propaganda statement with a meditation on the tragedy of war. Rossi argues that peripety as a reflection of Hellenistic and Roman historiography, and as a non-epic narrative feature in Aeneid 9-12, helps to design the narrative as a tragic structure. Hardie detects echoes of the political debate of the late Republic in the debate between Drances and Turnus in the Council of Latins. The rhetoric of deliberation and of invective, and the epic narrator’s voice, combine to prompt inquiry into the place of rhetoric in the epic. Berlin studies the thematic and structural dynamic of war and remembrance, the structural and thematic relationship between conflicts in Latium and Troy, and the relationship between the launching of the attack on the Latin capital and the end of the battle at Priam’s palace. Korenjak suggests that Pallas at the close of the epic may recall Pallas Athene’s role in the death of Procris in Odyssey 12. Perrell examines Vergil’s innovations in the tradition surrounding Juturna, the influence of contemporary history, and laments in the epic and in the tradition. She provides summaries of Barchiesi’s earlier readings of Juturna's lament. Theodorakopoulos is concerned "to show how the three canonical works of Vergil may be read as one poetic space, both in terms of the linear development of the poet's career but also in terms of an aesthetic and thematic coherence (156)." The intratextual echoing which shapes the epic in its final lines returns to the impossible pastoral of Eclogues 1 and 10, the death of an 'Arcadian' Italy and the darkness which terminates song. West accents the humor in the final conversation between Jupiter and Juno and asserts that the episode is Vergil's device to shape the end of the plot to support the epic's Augustan message.

CHARACTERS

103. Lisa B. Hughes, "Vergil's Creusa and Iliad 6," Mnem. 50 (1997) 401-423.

104. Andrew Laird, "Approaching characterisation in Virgil," CCV 282-293.

105. Godo Lieberg, "La Laus Mulieris nella poesia augustea," Maia 49 (1997) 349-365.

106. Mark Petrini, The Child and the Hero: Coming of Age in Catullus and Vergil. Ann Arbor 1997. Rev: Nappa, BMCR 9 (1998) 271-274.

107. C. Santini, "Il comitato di Enea" in AA.VV. Scritti...in memoriam di L. Pepe (Napoli 1996) 209-224.

108. A. Setaioli, "Palinuro: genesi di un personaggio tipico," BStudLat 27 (1997) 56-81.

109. Richard F. Thomas, "The isolation of Turnus (Aeneid, Book 12)," AEPC 271-302.

Hughes assesses Creusa's importance for the epic and her tragic loss; she illuminates Aeneas' character as a vital, valued part of his life. Laird examines characterisation as relation between poet and character, highlighting Vergil's distinctive techniques of psychological characterisation (283-287), and as relation between text and audience (287-292), thereby underscoring the constitutive role of readers and audience in determining characterisation. Setaioli's study of Palinurus extends to Dante and Ungharetti. Thomas contests assertive Augustan readings of Turnus which see him from the perspective of Aeneas and in relation to his obstruction to Aeneas' mission. To focus on Turnus' rage and anger is, for Thomas, "a huge simplification of the complexity of Vergil (285)." Thomas' counter-armament is formidable: the aristeia, devotio, his armor, behavior before and after Allecto, the similes, prognostication, and sensitivity to his isolation with an inimical Jupiter.

AENEID: LEGENDS AND MYTHS

110. Bernard Andreae and Claudio Parisi Presicca, Ulisse: il mito e la memoria. Roma 1996.

111. A. Ballabriga, "Survie et descendance d'Énée: le mythe grec archaïque," QUCC 55 (1997) 23-39.

112. Alexandre Grandazzi, The Foundations of Rome: Myth and History. Ithaca 1997.

113. Karin Luck-Huyse, Der Traum vom Fliegen in der Antike. [Palingenesia LXII] Stuttgart 1997. Rev: Pomeroy, BMCR 9 (1998) 261-262.

114. C. Santini, "Il mito di Orfeo in Virgilio e Ovidio," M. Rossi Cittadini (ed), Presenze classiche nelle letterature occidentali. Il mito dall'età antica all'età moderna e contemporanea. Perugia 1995. 187-203.

115. A. Setaioli, "Ulisse nell'Eneide," (vide #114) 167-86.

116. Chris. Smith, "Early Rome: myths and majesty," Omnibus 34 (September 1997) 14-16.

117. Marianne Wifstrand-Schiebe, Vergil und die tradition von den römischen Urkönigen. [Hermes Einzelschriften 76] Stuttgart 1997. Rev: Edlund-Berry, BMCR 9 (1998) 384-386.

118. James Zetzel, "Rome and its traditions," CCV 188-203.

Luck-Heyse studies the depiction of flight in Homer, Vergil, and Ovid. Wifstrand-Schiebe examines the story of Saturn, Vergil's picture of Saturn's reign in Latium, and the genealogy of Latinus. Zetzel notices that Vergil's account of Rome is marked by a combination of change with permanence, and of surface clarity with discordant details. Prophecies, which feature in Aeneid 1, 6, and 8, share similar content but show marked differences too; "there is very little overlap in specific content; the focus of each is different; and each is affected by its context within the poem as a whole (196)." Finally, "Rome's past, and its future, are what the reader will make of them (202)."

LANDSCAPE, TOPOGRAPHY AND ARCHAEOLOGY

119. Paolo Caputo, Ruggiero Morichi, Rosario Paone, Paola Rispoli, eds. Cuma e il suo parco archeologico. Un territorio e le sue testimonianze. Roma 1996. Rev. article: McKay, Vergilius 43 (1997) 78-88.

120. T. J. Cornell, The Beginnings of Rome: Rome from the Bronze Age to the Punic Wars (c.1000-264 BC). London 1995. Rev: Dench, JRS 87 (1997) 269-271; Forsythe: BMCR 8 (1997) 313-321.

121. R. Ross Holloway, The Archaeology of Early Rome and Latium. London 1996. Rev: O'Neill, JACTRev 23 (1998) 16.

RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY

122. R. Bracht Branham, ed. The Cynic Movement in Antiquity and its Legacy. Berkeley 1996.
123. Susanna Morton Braund, "Virgil and the cosmos: religious and philosophical ideas," CCV 204-221.
124. J. Dion, "Virgile et la tranquillité de l'âme," in J.-M. André, J. Dangell et P. Demont, edd. Les loisirs et l'héritage de la culture classique. [Collection Latomus 230] Bruxelles 1996.
125. J. T. Dyson, "Fluctus irarum, fluctus curarum: Lucretian religio in the Aeneid," AJP 118 (1997) 449-457.
126. Denis Feeney, Literature and Religion at Rome: Cultures, Contexts, Beliefs. Cambridge 1998.
127. D. P. Fowler, "Epicurean Anger," in Susanna Morton Braund, Christopher Gill (eds.), The Passions in Roman Thought and Literature. Cambridge 1997. 16-35.
128. Pierre Gallais, Joël Thomas, L'arbre de la forêt dans l'Énéide et l'Énéas. De la psyché antique à la psyché médiévale. Paris 1997.
129. R. Haussler, Hera und Juno. Stuttgart 1995. Rev: Potscher, AA 50 (1997) 25-27.
130. Robert A. Kaster, "The Shame of the Romans," TAPA 127 (1997) 1-19.
131. Peter Kingsley, Ancient Philosophy, Mystery, and Magic: Empedocles and Pythagorean Tradition. Oxford 1995. Rev: Bussanich, BMCR 9 (1998) 249-254.
132. David Konstan, Friendship in the Classical World. Cambridge 1997.
133. Dirk Obbink, ed. Philodemus and Poetry: Poetic Theory and Practice in Lucretius, Philodemus, and Horace. Oxford 1995. Rev: Sharrock, G&R 43 (1997) 232.
134. Dirk Obbink, Philodemus on Poetry. Book 1. Critical Text with Commentary. Oxford 1997.
135. Dirk Obbink, ed. Philodemus, On Piety, Part I. Critical Text with Commentary. Oxford 1996. Rev: Percy, BMCR 9 (1998) 362-366.
136. Darryl Phillips, "Seeking New Auspices; Interpreting Warfare and Religion in Virgil's Aeneid," Vergilius 43 (1997) 45-55.
137. David Potter, Prophets and Emperors: Human and Divine

Authority from Augustus to Theodosius. Cambridge MA 1994. Rev: Hamilton, CW 91 (1997) 59.

138. David Sider, The Epigrams of Philodemus. [Introduction, Text, Commentary] Oxford 1997.

139. Anastasia Tsarikopoulou-Summers, "Horace, Philodemus and the Epicureans at Herculaneum," Mnem. 51 (1998) 20-29.

Braund's chapter challenges the "conflicting claims" of Hellenistic philosophical schools on Vergil's alleged sympathies: "Vergil was not a doctrinaire member of any particular school of thought (220)." Her conclusion is valid: "Vergil absorbs ideas from a variety of sources and is much less concerned to produce a coherent synthesis than to integrate his material into its immediate context, often highly politicised (214)." Ethical issues and eschatology are complementary themes. Dyson argues that Vergil continually brings to life Epicurean caricatures of religio; the vengeful gods and fearful mortals whom Lucretius ridicules become prime actors in Vergil's epic. Kaster studies values, emotions, and institutions in connection with Roman "shame." Kingsley, inter alia, explores the implications of the volcanic Campi Phlegraei (and Etna) for the "fiery" component of Empedocles' philosophy. Phillips studies the circumstantial, defensible, effectively foreshadowing nature of auspices in the epic and in Roman state religion.

ROME AND AUGUSTUS

140. W. Martin Bloomer, Latinity and Literary Society at Rome. Philadelphia 1997.

141. A. K. Bowman, E. Champlin, A. Lintott, eds. Cambridge Ancient History ed. 2. Vol. 10: The Augustan Empire, 43 BC-AD 69. Cambridge 1996. Rev: Galinsky, CJ 93 (1997) 94-96; Alston, CR 48 (1998) 113-115; Stewart, NECJ 25 (1998) 101-103.

142. Diane Favro, The Urban Image of Augustan Rome. New York 1996. Rev: Galinsky, CJ 93 (1997) 96-98; Simpson, EMC 16 (1997) 219-229; Robinson, CR 48 (1998) 115-116.

143. Karl Galinsky, Augustan Culture: An Interpretive Introduction. Princeton 1996. Rev: Solodow, BMCR 9 (1998) 321-324; Wacker, Gymn. 105 (1998) 79-81; Habinek, Vergilius 43 (1997) 156-160; Crook, JRS 87 (1997) 287-288; Fantham, EMC 16 (1997) 515-520.

144. Gunther Gottlieb, "Religion in the Politics of Augustus (Aen. 1. 278-91; 8. 714-23; 12. 791-842)," AEP 21-36.

145. R. A. Gurval, Actium and Augustus: The Politics and Emotions of Civil War. Ann Arbor 1995. Rev: Pelling, JRS 87 (1997) 289-290.

146. Thomas Habinek and Alessandro Schiesaro, The Roman Cultural Revolution. Cambridge 1998

147. Ann L. Kuttner, Dynasty and Empire in the Age of Augustus. The Case of the Boscoreale Cups. Berkeley 1995. Rev: Galinsky, CJ 93 (1997) 98-99.

148. W. K. Lacey, Augustus and the Principate: The Evolution of the System. [ARCA 35] Leeds 1996. Rev: Galinsky, CJ 93 (1997) 99.

149. Hans-Peter Stahl, "Changing Views of the Political Aeneid," AEPC xv-xxxiii.

150. R. J. Tarrant, "Poetry and Power: Virgil's poetry in contemporary context," CCV 169-187.

Gottlieb associates key passages in Aeneid 1, 8, and 12 with Augustan religious policy highlighting the use of symbols in politics, political propaganda and its function, political community and cult community. Stahl's introduction to AEPC offers an excursus on the role of linguistic details, a survey of changing trends in Aeneid interpretations, accenting the wide variety of methodological approaches to the epic and to its political contexts. Tarrant accepts that Vergil's poetry engages seriously with political realities of his time while distancing itself from those realities, a stance which has been identified as ambivalent or multivocal. But the ambivalent or pessimistic outlook has bearing particularly on the poet's conception of human nature. Tarrant's explanation for the chiaroscuro "reading" of the epic is arresting: "the ambivalence has become more prominent in recent Virgilian criticism at the same time as ancient historians have begun to replace Syme's dark image of the princeps with more nuanced interpretations (186)."

VERGIL AND AUGUSTAN WRITERS: VERSE

151. Paolo Esposito, La narrazione inverosimile. Aspetti dell'epica ovidiana. Napoli 1994. Rev: Knox, Gnomon 70 (1998) 254-256.

152. E. Fantham, Roman Literary Culture: From Cicero to Apuleius. Baltimore and London 1996. Rev: Anderson, AJP 119 (1998) 135-138; Galinsky, CR 48 (1998) 79-81.

153. Anna Elissa Radke, ed. Candide Iudex: Beiträge zu augusteischen Dichtung. Festschrift für Walter Willem, zum 75. Geburtstag. Stuttgart 1998.

154. W. Wimmel, "Gallus und Thrakien bei Vergil und Horaz (zu Horaz. c. 3. 25)," WüJbb 21 (1996-97) 229-237.

Esposito is concerned with intertextuality, unambiguously manifest in the deliberate verbal allusions involving Achaemenides in Aeneid 3 and Ovid's Metamorphoses 14, with radiations from Homer's Odyssey. Kraggerud discusses instances where critics have suggested allusions that run counter to the surface meaning of the text: Aeneid 6, 460; 4, 412; 8, 394; 4, 149.

STYLE, LANGUAGE, AND METER

155. James C. Abbott, Jr., Roman Deceit: Dolus in Latin Literature and Roman Society. Diss. University of North Carolina, 1997.

156. Alessandro Barchiesi, "Virgilian narrative: (b) Ecphrasis," CCV 271-281.

157. G. Brugnoli, "Virgil in Etia," GIF 48 (1996) 110-113, "Virgilio rudis," GIF 48 (1996) 114-116.

158. M. Marjorie Crump, The Epyllion from Theocritus to Ovid. Reprint. Bristol 1997. Rev: Chambers, JACTRev 23 (1998) 24.

159. Joseph Farrell, "The Virgilian Intertext," CCV 222-238.

160. Don Fowler, "Virgilian Narrative (a) story-telling," CCV 259-270.

161. Don Fowler, "Second Thoughts on Closure," in Deborah H. Roberts, Francis M. Dunn, Don Fowler, eds. Classical Closure: Reading the End of Greek and Latin Literature. Princeton 1997. 3-22.

162. Shane Stuart Gasbarra, Conceptions of Likeness in the epic similes of Homer, Vergil, Dante, and Milton. Diss. Yale University 1990.

163. M. L. Gasparov, A History of European Versification. Transl. G. S. Smith, Marina Tarlinskaja. G. S. Smith, with L. Holford Stevens, eds. Oxford 1996. Rev: Halporn, BMCR 8 (1997) 842-846.

164. Alan James Maki Haffa, The Cultural Poetics of Supplication in Epic: Homer, Vergil, Tasso. Diss. University of Wisconsin/Madison 1996.

165. G. C. Hansen, "Sane in Vergil and Ovid: an unpoetisches Wort revisited," CQ 47 (1997) 316-319.

166. Philip Hardie, "Closure in Latin Epic," in Deborah H. Roberts, Frances M. Dunn, Don Fowler, eds. Classical Closure: Reading the End of Greek and Latin Literature. Princeton 1997. 139-162.

167. Philip Hardie, "Virgil and Tragedy," CCV 312-326.

168. Martin Helzle, Der Stil in der Mensch: Redner und Reden

im römischen Epos. [Beitrage zur Altertumskunde, Bande 73] Stuttgart and Leipzig 1996. Rev: Dominik, BMCR 9 (1998) 332-336.

169. Stephen Hinds, Allusion and Intertext: Dynamics of Appropriation in Roman Poetry. Cambridge 1998.

170. Günter Klause, Die Periphrase der Nomina propria bei Vergil. Frankfurt am Main 1993.

171. E. Kraggerud, "Disiectorum voces poetarum: on imitation in Vergil's Aeneid," SO 72 (1997) 105-117.

172. F. J. Lelièvre, "Aeneas Amens: Sound, Metre, Thought in Aeneid 4," Vergilius 43 (1997) 19-21.

173. R. Lesueur, "Sur la structure rythmique du récit de quelques épisodes de la Thébaïde de Stace and de l'Énéide," REL 74 (1996) 231-246.

174. Christopher Michael McDonough, Liminal Animals in Roman Religion and Folklore. Diss. University of North Carolina 1996.

175. James J. O'Hara, "Virgil's Style," CCV 241-258.

176. James J. O'Hara, Vergil and the Alexandrian Tradition of Etymological Wordplay. Ann Arbor 1996. Rev: Van Sickle, CJ 93 (1998) 211-212; Morgan, CR 48 (1998) 27-29; Willis, BMCR 9 (1998) 367-370; Sharrock, G&R 44 (1997) 223-224; Harrison, EMC 16 (1997) 520-523.

177. Ellen Oliensis, "Sons and lovers: sexuality and gender in Virgil's poetry," CCV 294-311.

178. Michael Paschalis, Virgil's Aeneid: Semantic Relations and Proper Names. Oxford 1997.

179. Herman Rego Pontes, "Cracking the Stateliest Measure: Vergil's Broken Cadence in Aeneid I & IV," in Janet P. Bews, Ian C. Storey, Martin R. Boyne, eds. Celebratio: Thirtieth Anniversary Essays at Trent University (Ontario). Peterborough ON. 1998.

180. Deborah Roberts, "Afterword: Ending and Aftermath, Ancient and Modern," in Deborah H. Roberts, Francis M. Dunn, Don Fowler, eds. Classical Closure: Reading the End in Greek and Latin Literature. Princeton 1997. 251-273. Rev: Skinner, BMCR 9 (1998) 373-378.

181. Andreola Francesca Rossi, Battle-Scenes in Virgil: An Analysis of Narrative Techniques. Diss. Harvard University 1997.

182. E. A. Schmidt, "Vergil und episches Holzfällen. Zu einer unerkannten Technik poetischer Verdichtung," Hyperboreus 3 (1997) 57-81.

183. R. A. Smith, Poetic Allusion and Poetic Embrace in Ovid and Virgil. Ann Arbor 1997.

184. Robert Francis West, Animal Suffering in Roman Literature. Diss. University of Calgary (Alberta) 1997.

185. Jeffrey Wills, Repetition in Latin Poetry: Figures of Allusion. Oxford 1997. Rev: Sharrock, G&R 44 (1997) 224.

Bristol has rendered valuable service by reprinting Crump's landmark study of the epyllion. Farrell's essay complements his earlier offering in Vergil's Georgics and the traditions of ancient epic: The art of allusion in literary history (New York 1991) 3-25. Farrell argues now that Vergil's intertextual practice is pervasive, analytical, and thematically motivated, and is not limited to any single source or model. "Rather than a skeleton key that opens up the secrets of the poem, the intertext presents vistas and possibilities that would otherwise remain unglimped and inaccessible (237)." Fowler's chapter in The Cambridge Companion deals with Vergilian narratology: with narrators (Vergil, the Muse, and Jupiter, the Master Narrator); with oppositions; with manipulations of narrative order, duration, and frequency; with point of view, and with singing and writing. "Whatever fixity a text might possess...disappears in the very act of reading which is necessary to give it meaning (269)." Fowler's "First Thoughts on Closure: Problems and Prospects," appeared in MD 22 (1989) 75-122. His "Second Thoughts" surveys and deconstructs the study of closure. Internal divisions and segmentation, Fowler argues, complicate the notion of an ending, intertextuality complicates the notion of a discrete work, and complications beleaguer the assumption that the open, closed, or indeterminate nature of a work can be isolated from the act of interpretation. Hansen argues that editors have chosen the wrong variant at Aeneid 10,48: colloquial sane should be replaced by procul. Hardie sketches earlier attempts to define the tragic in Vergil's epic and accents recent criticism of Attic tragedy along the lines of political, social, and cultural relationships, of contesting roles within the structures of gender, household, and city. But Vergil's use of tragedy needs also to be assessed against the background of the cultural and ideological functions of Roman Republican tragedy. Finally, there is need for an assessment of Vergil's role in amalgamating "the commemorative, panegyric traditions of historical epic with the problematics of Attic legendary tragedy (325)." Helzlsouer's volume provides insights into the rhetorical character of the speeches of Dido, Aeneas, and Turnus. Kraggerud discusses instances where critics have conjured intertextual allusions that run counter to the surface meaning of the text (Aeneid 6, 460; 4, 412; 8, 394; 4, 149). Lelièvre studies Aeneid 4, 279f., Aeneas' aphasia in reaction to Mercury's message from Jupiter. O'Hara's chapter is concerned with word-order, hexameter patterns and stress accent, the Vergilian sentence, the practice of "theme and variation," hysteron-proteron, paratactic style and ambiguity, sound-effects and rhetorical devices, noun-adjective patterns, metrical effects, and diction. O'Hara closes with an exhortation: "A modern full-length study of Virgilian style and poetic language is needed: the tools and talent to produce it now exist (257)." Oliensis surveys lovers in Vergil's Eclogues with respect to poetic conventions and the mores of segments of late Republican Roman society; the Georgics provide additional insights culminating with the bees and Orpheus' punishment "for his orientation toward the maternal source (302)." The Aeneid completes and further complicates gender roles and sexuality in Vergil. The final verdict: "While generic differences allow some varieties to emerge, sexual hierarchies are carefully preserved in a productive dialectic that passes from song to home to nation (311)."

VERGIL AND EARLIER WRITERS

186. E. Courtney, The Fragmentary Latin Poets. [Edition, with commentary]. Rev: Mariotti, Gnomon 70 (1998) 204-209.

187. Cameron, Alan. Callimachus and His Critics. Princeton 1995.

ANCIENT AUTHORS AFTER VERGIL

188. V. Estévez, "Umbricius and Aeneas: A Reading of Juvenal III," Maia 48 (1996) 281-299.

189. I. Frings, "Hypsipyle und Aeneas: zur Vergil imitation in Thebais V, in AA.VV. Epicedion: Hommage à P. Papinius Statius. Poitiers 1996. 145-160.

190. M. Fucecchi, "Il restauro dei modelli antichi: tradizione epica e tecnica manieristica in Valerio Flacco," MD 36 (1996) 101-165.

191. D. Gagliardi, "L'epica post-lucanea (sulla presenza di Virgilio nella poesia del primo impero)," Orpheus 17 (1996) 289-310.

192. Richard Gilder, III, Goddesses Unbound: Furies and Furial Imagery in the Works of Seneca, Lucan and Statius. Diss. University of Pennsylvania 1997.

193. Antonio La Penna, "Fallit imago: Una polemica di Manilio contro Virgilio e Lucrezio (nota a Manilio IV. 306)," Maia 49 (1997) 107-108.

194. Sabine MacCormack, The Shadows of Poetry: Vergil in the Mind of Augustine. Berkeley 1998.

195. Donka D. Markus. "Transfiguring Heroism: Nisus and Euryalus in Statius' Thebaid," Vergilius 43 (1997) 56-62.

196. C. Martín Puente, "Las Géorgicas de Virgilio, fuente del Hilas de Draconcio [Dracontius]," Emérita 65 (1997) 328-329.

197. M. Salanitro, "Il sacrificium di Laocoonte in Virgilio e in Petronio," RhM 102 (1995) 291-294.

198. R. J. Tarrant, "Aspects of Virgil's reception in antiquity," CCV 56-72.

199. Charles Marie Ternes, "Securos latices et longa obliuia (Aen. 6. 703-723). On Comprehension levels in the Aeneid and Ausonius' Mosella," BAL 26 (1997) 124-153.

Markus deals with Statius' recreation of Vergil's Nisus and Euryalus in his Hopleus and Dymas episode in Thebaid 10, 347-448. Both poets engage with popular paradigms of heroism and self-inflicted death, suggesting reflection on epic's function as a public medium. Tarrant treats shifting literary tastes of the mid and late first century AD, the Flavian period, and the Christian era. The "conjunction of his poetry with imperial ideology...is a recurring feature of his ancient reception (71)." Ternes' paper explores Vergilian influence on Ausonius, trends in scholarship relating to the contexts of Vergil's epic, divine action and heroism and their Augustan implications. Analysis of Aeneid 6, 703-723 precedes assessment of Ausonius' Mosella, dedicated to Nature and the countryside. The two poets are markedly different, but both share "The quest for a peaceful abundance and the calming down of ancient terrors...Excludit veteres nova gratia curas [Mos. 207]."

ANCIENT COMMENTARIES, SCHOLIA

200. Don Fowler, "The Virgil Commentary of Servius," CCV 73-78.

201. Ph. Heuzé, "Quelques évidences, vraies ou fausses, chez Horace et Virgile," in Carlos Léry, Laurent Pernot, eds., Dire l'évidence (Philosophie et rhétorique antiques). Paris/Montréal 1997. 197-206.

202. Giuseppe Ramires, "Per una nuova edizione di Servio," RivFil 124 (1996) 318-329.

203. Giuseppe Ramires, ed. Servio: Commento al Libro IX dell'Eneide di Virgilio. Con le aggiunte del cosiddetto Servio Danielino. Introduzione, bibliografia, edizione critica. Bologna 1996.

204. A. Setaioli, "Évidence et évidenciation: le message de Virgile et son explication par Servius," in Carlos Léry, Laurent Pernot (#201) 59-73.

205. Raymond J. Starr, "Aeneas as the Flamen Dialis? Vergil's Aeneid and the Servian Exegetical Tradition," Vergilius 43 (1997) 63-70.

Fowler pleads for judicious use of Servius' commentaries which "are always a potentially productive stimulus for criticism (78)." Starr's article notes that Servius and Servius Danielis show that readers might view Aeneas allegorically as a religious icon. Vergil's scholarly presentation of religious antiquities reflects the approach of commentators and teachers who read and interpreted Vergil's epic.

MANUSCRIPTS, TEXTUAL TRADITION

206. G. Ballaira, "Un rifacimento di versi virgiliani (Aen. 1, 477-93): il PSI II 142 recto (CLA III.289)," in AA.VV. De Tuo Tibi. Omaggio degli allievi a Itala Lana. Bologna 1996. 183-216.

207. Mariano Dell'Olmo, ed. Virgilio e il Chiostro. Manoscritti di autori classici e civiltà monastica. Roma 1996. [Exhibition, Abbazia di Montecassino]

208. J. Kramer, "Der lateinisch-griechische Vergilpalimpsest aus Mailand," ZPE 111 (1996) 1-20.

VERGIL AND LATER AGES: GENERAL

209. Colin Burrow, "Virgil, from Dante to Milton," CCV 79-90.

Burrow traces Vergil reception from Dante, "the most sophisticated renovator of Virgil (80)," through Ariosto, Tasso, and Spenser. For the Renaissance Vergil provided "the concept of an encomiastic epic, which praises a nation state and its ruler and which seeks to manifest the strengths of a vernacular tongue (86)." Milton's Vergil was shorn of his one-time role as moral guide; he had become "a model of how to insinuate one's poem into the complex of intertextual relations within which epic poems make their significance (90)."

MIDDLE AGES

210. Christopher Baswell, Virgil in Medieval England. Figuring the Aeneid from the Twelfth Century to Chaucer. Cambridge 1995. Rev: Blyth, Speculum 72 (1997) 106-108; Burnett, Medium Aevum 65 (1996) 299-300.

211. Janet P. Bews, "Virgilian Motifs in Dante's Purgatorio," in Janet P. Bews, Ian C. Storey, Martin R. Boyne, eds., Celebratio: Thirtieth Anniversary Essays at Trent University (Ontario). Peterborough, ON. 1998.

212. Domenico Comparetti, Vergil in the Middle Ages. Transl. E. F. M. Benecke (1895). Reprint, with introduction by Jan M. Ziolkowski, Princeton 1997.

213. Ann Dalzell, Transmundus, Introductiones Dictandi: Text edited and translated with annotations. Toronto 1995. Rev. article: Fantham, Vergilius 43 (1997) 71-77.

214. T. Privitera, "Enea a Palazzo (a proposito di una nuova cronologia del Querolus)," GIF 49 (1997) 67-78.

215. J. Solana Pujalte, "El hexámetro del Aeneidos Liber XIII de Maffeo Vegio y sus modelos clásicos (I)," Latomus 56 (1997) 382-395.

216. Marco Veglia, "Lucerna ardens. Appunti su Calvacanti, Virgilio e il problema del 'Disdegno'," Italianistica 26 (1997) 9-21.

The paperback edition of Comparetti's classic with Jan Ziolkowski's introduction is a welcome resource.

RENAISSANCE AND TUDOR WRITERS

217. Craig Kallendorff, "In Search of a Patron: Anguillara's vernacular Virgil and the print culture of Renaissance Italy," Papers, Bibliographical Society of America 91 (1997) 294-325.

218. Norbert Seeber. Enea Vergilianus. Vergilisches in den 'Kommentaren' des Enea Silvio Piccolomini (Pius II). Innsbruck 1997.

219. John Watkins, The Specter of Dido: Spenser and Virgilian Epic. New Haven 1995. Rev: James, CompLit 49 (1997) 90-92.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY WRITERS

220. Tanya Marie Caldwell, Towards a Carmen Perpetuum: Dryden's Georgics and Aeneis. Diss. University of Toronto 1997.

221. George F. Butler, "Fathers and sons in Vergil's Aeneid and Book 6 of Paradise Lost," CML 17 (1997) 265-277.

222. George F. Butler, "The Wrath of Aeneas and the Triumph of the Son: Virgil's Aegaeon and Paradise Lost," CLS 34 (1997) 103-118.

223. Frederick M. Keener, ed. John Dryden: Virgil, The Aeneid. Harmondsworth 1997.

224. Timothy James Markey, The Work of Imitation: Virgil's Eclogues in England from Ascham to Milton. Diss. Harvard University 1996.

225. Marià Ruiz-Funes Torres, Juan Luis de la Cerda's "Commentary on the First Six Books of Virgil's Aeneid." Murcia, 1994.

226. André Verbart, Fellowship in Paradise Lost: Vergil, Milton, Wordsworth. Amsterdam/Atlanta GA 1995.

NINETEENTH CENTURY WRITERS

227. V. Buchheit, "Frühling bei Vergil und Hölderlin," Euphorion 91 (1997) 157-181.

228. Tiziana Privitera, Didone mascherata: per il codice genetico di Emma Bovary, Pisa 1996. Rev: Laura, BStudLat 27 (1997) 631-633.

229. Michael Riffaterre, "Virgil's romantic muse: rewrites of a classic in Chateaubriand and Hugo," MLN 110 (1995) 1165-1187.

230. James Henry Rubin, "Delacroix's Dante and Virgil as a romantic manifesto: politics and theory in the early 1820s," Art Journal 52 (1993) 48-58.

TWENTIETH CENTURY WRITERS

231. Fiona Cox, "Envoi: the death of Virgil," CCV 327-336.

232. Monika Fingas, Die Struktur von Hermann Broch's Roman 'Der Tod des Vergil'. Münster 1996.

233. Jurgen Heizmann, Antike und Moderne in Hermann Broch's 'Tod des Vergil': Über Dichtung und Wissenschaft. Utopie und Ideologie. Tübingen 1997.

234. Herbert H. Huxley, "Homage to Virgil," Vergilius 43 (1997) 164. [Latin verse]

235. Duncan F. Kennedy, "Modern receptions and their interpretative implications," CCV 38-55.

236. David P. Kubiak, "Cicero, Vergil, and the rejection of friendship in Marcel Proust's À la recherche du temps perdu," CML 17 (1997) 135-147.

237. Harry C. Routledge, "What is a Classic? Answering Mr. Eliot's Question Fifty Years Later," in Gareth Schmeling, Jon D. Mikelson, eds., Qui Miscuit Utile Dulci: Festschrift Essays for Paul Lachlan MacKendrick. Wauconda, IL 1998. 329-341.

238. Brigitte Louise Sandquist, The Underground Workshop of Received Ideas: 'Finnegan's Wake' and Literary History. Diss. University of California (Irvine) 1997.

239. Otto Tost. Der Antike als Motiv und Thema in Hermann Broch's 'Der Tod des Vergil'. Innsbruck 1996.

240. Cynthia Dianne Wallace, Toward Re-Cognition of the Epic Imagination: Uncovering the Legacies of Homer and Virgil in James A. Michener's 'Texas'. Diss. Texas A&M University, 1997.

241. Theodore Ziolkowski, Virgil and the Moderns. Princeton 1993. Rev: Hall, Philosophy & Literature 19 (1995) 175-176; Calder, Journ. Engl. & Germanic Philology 94 (1995) 588-591; Barbarese, SewaneeRev 104 (1996) xxi-xxiv; Tess, Hudson Review 47 (1994) 323-330; Porter, Modern Philology 94 (1996) 60-63; Johnson, CLS 33 (1996) 136-140.

Cox's 'envoi' focuses on Hermann Broch's novel as forerunner of Adam Parry's perception, "The two voices of Virgil's Aeneid" (1963), the public voice of triumph and the private voice of regret. "To say that The Death of Virgil is the twentieth century's most important response to Virgil seems no exaggeration (335)." Kennedy examines the implications of T. S. Eliot's engagement with Vergil and the ambivalence of his use of the word "tradition," and particularly the way in which Vergil's epic functions as a usable past for Eliot. Kennedy's interpretation configures the epic as a dramatic allegory of the act of historical understanding with an exploration of some of the issues involved. The Aeneid offers its readers, whatever their preoccupations, who search for the reassurance of shape and closure, an end, "a memorably elaborated and seductively attractive response: a sense of destiny, an end to history in imperium and the role-complex of authority and submission it offers (55)."

VERGIL AND ART

242. M. J. H. Liversidge, "Virgil in Art," CCV 91-103.

243. Jennifer Klein Morrison, "Apollonio di Giovanni's Cassoni," YaleUnivArtGalleryBulletin (1992) 26-44.

244. "The Poet Virgil in a Basket," (engraving 1525), MMA Bulletin 54 (1997) 45.

245. Louisa Wood Ruby, "Sebastiaen Vrancx as illustrator of Virgil's Aeneid," Master Drawings 28 (1990) 54-73.

246. Antonie Wlosok, "Textkritische Maginalien und allegorisierend Illustrationen im Vergilcodex 837 der Universitätsbibliothek in Valencia," in C. Leonardi and Munk Olsen, eds., The Classical Tradition in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. Proceedings of the first European Science Foundation Workshop on "The Reception of Classical Texts," (Spoleto 1995) 75-110, figs. 1-11.

247. Antonie Wlosok, "Illustrated Vergil Manuscripts: Reception and Exegesis," CJ 93 (1998) 355-382.

Liversidge examines why Vergil has provided such an enduring and richly varied visual legacy and argues that his celebrity attaches to the perception of two Vergils, one the "classical" epitome of intellect, gravitas, and heavenly inspiration, the response of Poussin, and the other the "romantic" figure of Ribera, a poet "of passionate feeling, caught up in an intense agony of imaginative creation and vision (102)." Wlosok (#247) studies manuscript illustrations as evidence for the history of interpretation and reception of Vergil's epic. Her article deals with Aeneas in late Antiquity and in the twelfth century where the static hero is depicted as a contemporary horseman garbed in a long robe or armored, sometimes as hero on parade. Allegorical interpretations feature in illustrations of the Dido episode through the 15th century. Pictures of Aeneas' descent and of his encounter with Anchises in Elysium transpose pagan conceptions into Christian ones, sometimes presupposing a cosmic interpretation of the Vergilian underworld recalling Servius and Macrobius. The illustrations function as a pictorial commentary, sometimes literal, sometimes allegorical. Wlosok demonstrates once again that "research on the reception of classical authors (should) give due attention to manuscript illuminations (381)."

VERGIL AND MUSIC

248. Jan Novak (composer), Vergil's Dido & Mimus Magicus. Limited edition CD. Bayerischer Rundfunk, conducted by Rafael Kubelik. Libretto: Latin, English, German. [Adaptations of Aeneid 4, and Eclogue 8]. Wauconda, IL. 1997.

MCMASTER UNIVERSITY

14 JULY 1998

FIRST CALL FOR PAPERS
THE VERGILIAN SOCIETY
Symposium Cumanum
THE ETRUSCANS IN CAMPANIA
to be held at the
Villa Vergiliana, Cumae, Italy: October 13-16, 1999
FOR MORE INFORMATION AND SUBMISSIONS, CONTACT:
Professor Patricia A. Johnston	FAX 978-263-6086
Department of Classical Studies	TEL 978-263-2192
Brandeis University, M.S.016	email: paj@ma.ultranet.com or
Waltham, MA 02254-9110, USA	johnston@binah.cc.brandeis.edu